Numéro d'ordre de la microfiche	Le processus de reconnaissance du statut de réfugié au sens de la Convention de Genève, tel qu'il est énoncé dans la Loi sur l'immigration, sert à déterminer si les personnes qui revendiquent ce statut y ont effectivement droit et peuvent bénéficier de la protection accordée aux réfugiés au sens de la Convention. Ce processus s'est avéré inadéquat, tant au point de vue juridique que pratique. Dans ce bulletin, on examine les mécanismes en vigueur actuellement et le projet de réforme contenu dans la loi C-55 déposé en mai 1987.

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fiched product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

Institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in Microlog. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprint may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (●) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications provinciales: Des ententes de dépôt ont été conclues avec plusieurs bibliothèques provinciales pour que les abonnés de Microlog reçoivent toutes les publications de ces provinces. Lorsqu'aucune entente n'existe, les listes de publications émises par les provinces sont examinées afin d'acquérir les documents.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.
2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.
3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.
4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.
5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

“How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?”

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

“Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?”

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

STEP 2/DEUXIÈME ÉTAPE

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back. Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

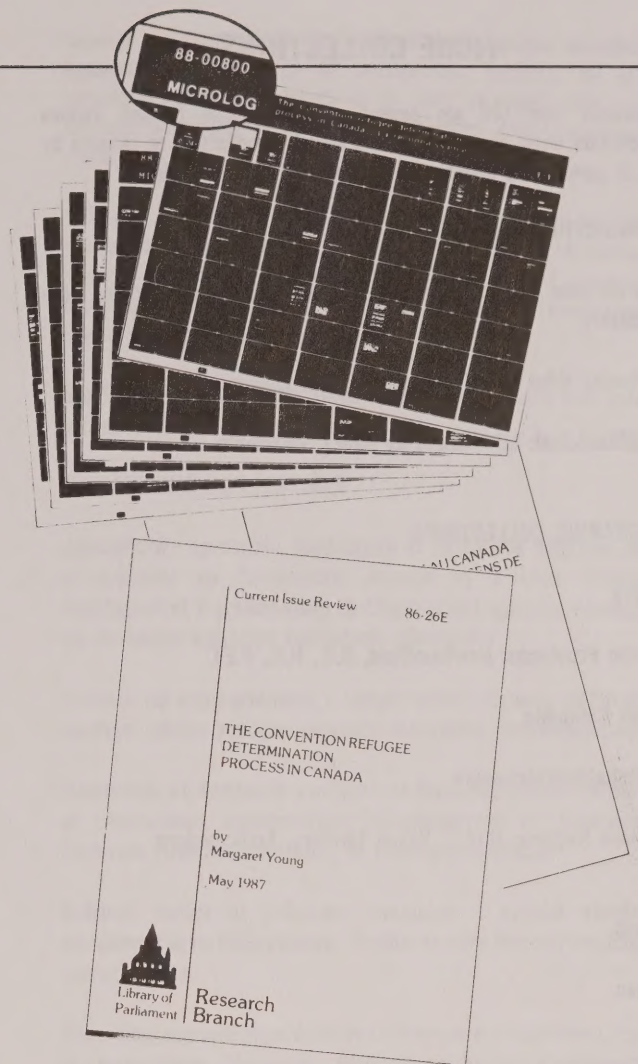

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

The 1995 budget and block funding : a report

National Council of Welfare (Canada). Ottawa : The Council, 1995. 30 p. French ed. (Le Budget de 1995...) on the same fiche. ISBN 0-662-23523-1 CCG-P no. H68-37/1995E MICROLOG 95-05726 (1 fiche)

This report describes welfare in Canada prior to the birth of the Canada Assistance Plan and the huge advances that came about because of CAP. It analyzes the 1995 budget proposals and the disastrous impact they would have on real people with real needs. It outlines a better alternative for funding welfare and social services. And it concludes with an appeal for openness and flexibility rather than secrecy and rigidity in the making of public policy. CA CO DE PA SA SS

The concept of "aboriginal rights" is difficult to define succinctly. This discussion of two competing aboriginal rights theories illustrates the complexity of the issue, and serves as background to current legal and constitutional debates. The document also examines the following points: Royal Proclamation of 1763; Constitution Act, 1867 and the Indian Act; the Constitution Act, 1982; proposed amendment of the Constitution Act, 1982; aboriginal title (land rights); federal land claims policy; and, alternatives to adjudication and negotiation for the recognition of aboriginal rights. Access and equity, view from multicultural Toronto : an address to Developing a Multicultural Health Agenda : a National Ethnic Health Policy Conference

By Robert Doyle and Livy Visano. Toronto : Social Planning Council of Metropolitan Toronto, 1988. 38 p. : Bibl. MICROLOG 95-05688 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

This paper first traces the development and introduction of government measures in Canada intended to achieve equity and access for all citizens, including members of cultural and racial minorities. The authors comment on these structures, policies, and strategies in light of struggles to achieve equity and access to health and social services at the community level in Metropolitan Toronto. They review an action research study on access to health and social services for minorities carried out in Metropolitan Toronto and evaluate the community action process in order to comment on both the Canadian and Australian approaches to multiculturalism. Finally, the authors make observations and draw conclusions that may help others to devise a strategy to achieve equity and access in health services for a multicultural community. HE MU ON SA SS

Cette étude a été réalisée dans le cadre du programme sur le transport à distance des polluants aéroportés du Plan vert du Canada. Son objectif principal est relié à la vérification de l'efficacité des programmes canadien et américain de lutte contre les pluies acides par la détermination du rythme et de l'ampleur du rétablissement des lacs du Québec méridional endommagés par les pluies acides. Pour ce faire, la physico-chimie de 58 lacs de tête situés sur la rive nord du fleuve Saint-Laurent entre la rivière des Outaouais et Baie-Comeau a été étudiée afin de dégager les aspects temporels et spatiaux de la récupération ou de l'acidification des lacs de 1985 à 1993. Yellowknife : Northwest Territories Power Corporation, Planning and Technical Services, 1994. 114 p. : ill. MICROLOG 95-05643 (2 fiche)

The purpose of this document is to forecast electric energy sales, losses and generation, peak demand and customer counts for each of NWTPC's generating stations. The individual community forecasts are organized by area. There are seven areas. Forecasts are provided for a ten year period, for communities served strictly by thermal generation and for a twenty year period for the 2 hydro-electric systems. For each community, a separate forecast is created for each class of customer: domestic, commercial, industrial, wholesale and street lighting. Initially, a statistical technique is used to derive the base forecasts from historical information.

Ce document se penche sur le processus maturationnel des entreprises qui font leur entrée dans une branche d'activité économique en construisant de nouvelles usines et examine dans quelle mesure l'amélioration de la performance de la cohorte des entrants est le résultat d'une sélection qui élimine les entrants inefficaces ou d'un processus d'apprentissage par lequel les survivants apprennent à améliorer leur performance par rapport aux entreprises en place. La sélection de même que l'apprentissage sont mis en corrélation avec la performance après l'entrée. Même si la sélection et l'apprentissage n'ont pas le même effet sur le degré de croissance après l'entrée, la sélection en soi contribue davantage à la croissance globale d'une cohorte.

Canada's 1991 Farm Income Protection Act introduced two major farm income stabilization programs, the Gross Revenue Insurance Plan (GRIP) and the Net Income Stabilization Account. To analyze the impact of GRIP and NISA on the economy and environment of western Canada, Agriculture Canada proposes an integrated systems approach including the Canadian Regional Agricultural Model (CRAM) and components for input substitution, policy, ecology, and trade-off analysis. This report outlines the integrated systems approach and the major rules and provisions of GRIP and NISA that will be explicitly modelled. It then describes the methodology for modifying CRAM and the environmental component that will be linked to CRAM to evaluate soil erosion impacts of the programs. Finally, the report describes economic and environmental model linkages and concludes with proposed policy links.

To evaluate the resource neutrality of Canadian farm income stabilization programs, with an emphasis on land use and soil degradation, Agriculture Canada is formulating an integrated agro-ecological economic model. This report describes the environmental component of the integrated model, including the Erosion Productivity Impact Calculator (EPIC). The environmental modelling system discussed will be configured to address the problems of wind and water erosion, organic matter depletion, and nutrient movement under the scenarios of two agricultural programs. The report details the structure of the EPIC model, reviews the development of the integrated model's environmental database, and describes calibration and testing of EPIC for the Prairie Provinces. Finally, the report assesses EPIC's strengths and weaknesses and makes recommendations for further research.

La première partie trace quelques problèmes actuels de l'industrie en tentant d'en circonscrire les causes. On examine ensuite les conséquences d'une baisse du CMM pour les producteurs, pour les transformateurs et pour les secteurs de la distribution et de la vente au détail. Dans cette analyse, on prend en considération la valeur des quotas et les frais financiers que devraient encourir les agriculteurs dans l'éventualité où ils voudraient maintenir leur niveau de production actuel. Le rapport se termine par une exploration des autres solutions envisageables, notamment la baisse du prix de certains produits, comme le beurre et le fromage, ou l'établissement de catégories spéciales de lait selon les produits. Ce document s'intéresse aussi aux possibilités de resserrer les coûts de production du lait.

The objective of the Missing Children's Registry is to assist police agencies, nationally, and internationally through Interpol, in ensuring the safe and speedy recovery of children separated from their families. The missing children's annual report statistically reflects the extent of the problem of missing children within this country. Information in the report is obtained from the Canadian Police Information Centre and covers the calendar year. The report gives an overview and looks at stranger abductions, runaways, parental abduction, children at risk, and trends by various criteria such as sex and province.

Archean supracrustal rocks in the south-central District of Keewatin, Northwest Territories, Canada : towards a working depositional and tectonic model of the Ennadai-Rankin greenstone belt

By Lawrence B. Aspler. Yellowknife : Indian and Northern Affairs Canada, NWT Geological Mapping, 1994. 84 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. (Open file / Northern Affairs Program (Canada). NWT Geology Division ; EGS 1994-17)
MICROLOG 95-05830 (1 fiche)

Archean greenstone belts are an important repository for economic minerals. In the southern District of Keewatin, the Ennadai-Rankin greenstone belt forms a northeast-trending corridor of mainly greenschist facies Archean supracrustal rocks that constitutes the second largest Archean greenstone belt in Canada. This paper provides detailed descriptions of the sedimentology, physical volcanology, and stratigraphy of the Archean supracrustal rocks exposed in the central part of the Ennadai-Rankin greenstone belt, based on data collected during 1:50,000-scale mapping. The paper also interprets the depositional environments of individual stratigraphic units and integrates these in terms of a submarine volcanic plateau-slope-basin depositional system. Finally, the paper examines whether the lithostratigraphy and depositional parts determined for the central part of the belt are regionally applicable, arriving at provisional statements regarding the depositional geometry and tectonic setting of the belt as a whole.

This booklet is intended for art teachers working with grades 1 to 8. It describes what is known about the possible risks associated with some arts materials, and how those risks can be minimized. It outlines how substances in our environment can affect us; who could be at risk; which techniques and materials can be safely used in an arts course for children; and which may need special precautions. Information is included on pigments, solvents, adhesives, and corrosives, and on such techniques as painting, sculpture, printmaking, ceramics, photoprocessing, dyeing, and enamelling. An appendix provides a convenient table, arranged alphabetically by art technique, showing the material or process used in that technique and the corresponding hazard.

All cultural policy is an expression of government willingness to adopt and implement a set of coherent principles, objectives and means to protect and foster a country's cultural expression. The arts are the foundation of such expression. This review focuses exclusively on Canadian cultural policy as it concerns the arts, that is, on the range of government actions that have a direct effect on creative and performing artists and on the organizations within which these artists work. It describes the leading concerns with respect to this country's cultural policy for the arts and the main responses of the federal government.

On peut dire que toute politique culturelle est la manifestation de la volonté des gouvernements d'adopter et de mettre en oeuvre un ensemble cohérent de principes, d'objectifs et de moyens visant la protection et l'épanouissement de l'expression culturelle d'un pays. Les arts sont le fondement même d'une telle expression. Dans ce bulletin, nous nous penchons sur la partie de la politique culturelle canadienne qui porte sur les arts, soit l'ensemble des actions de l'État qui ont un effet direct sur les artistes créateurs et les interprètes ainsi que sur les organismes artistiques au sein desquels les artistes exercent leur art. Nous y décrivons les principaux enjeux de la politique culturelle canadienne dans le secteur des arts et les principaux gestes posés par le gouvernement fédéral pour y répondre.

About 29% of the Newfoundland and Labrador population obtain potable water from wells, most of which are completed in fractured rock with low matrix permeability. To determine the effectiveness of hydraulic stimulation in improving the yield of such wells, six test wells were drilled into bedrock at various locations in eastern Newfoundland. The investigators compared the extent of fractures, well yield, and water quality before and after stimulation. This report presents the results of this research, describing the site selection procedures, well evaluation and stimulation techniques and equipment used, site characteristics, well performance, and aquifer tests. The study also attempted to determine whether fractures opened during stimulation eventually closed over time due to hysteresis effects. The report includes a tentative ranking of bedrock units in terms of their well stimulation potential.

In June 1990, the Ontario government enacted Bill 68, which established a threshold no-fault auto insurance system, in which the right to sue for accident damages was eliminated for all but the most seriously injured victims. This paper outlines the history of auto insurance in Ontario before Bill 68 and reviews studies of the auto insurance system that were conducted prior to Bill 68. It then describes the background, rationale, benefits, rate determination methods, dispute resolution systems, and other matters concerning Bill 68 and Bill 164, enacted in 1994 to address deficiencies in the earlier Bill. The paper discusses reasons why auto insurance is again a current issue in Ontario and notes recent related developments in auto insurance in other provinces.

Ce rapport décrit l'assistance sociale au Canada avant la création du Régime d'assistance publique du Canada et les progrès considérables que le RAPC nous a permis de réaliser. Le rapport analyse les propositions du budget de 1995 et les conséquences désastreuses que ces propositions auraient pour des personnes en chair et en os qui ont des besoins bien réels. Il présente d'autres moyens, plus avantageux, pour assurer le financement de l'assistance sociale et des services sociaux. Il se termine par un appel aux décideurs à faire preuve d'ouverture et de souplesse, plutôt que de dissimulation et de rigidité, dans l'établissement des politiques.

Alberta. Provincial Mental Health Board. Edmonton : The Board, 1995. 20 p. : ill. MICROLOG 95-05904 (1 fiche)

The Provincial Mental Health Board of Alberta has the mission of guiding the development of a province-wide, community-based, and consumer-focused mental health system. This document notes the Board's guiding principles, the background and key issues involved in improving Alberta's mental health system, and the new directions to be undertaken in implementing such improvements. Those directions include development of seven core services; using human resources in family and community settings; integration of the mental health system with the 17 health planning regions of Alberta; establishment of linkages with regional health authorities; and measurement of the results of health promotion activities. The report also outlines how the mental health system will be funded and the steps to be taken 1995-97. An appendix lists the Board's goals, objectives, and strategies.

By Larry Pedersen. Victoria : Ministry of Forests, 1995. 49 p. : Bibl. MICROLOG 95-05793 (1 fiche)

The Bulkley Timber Supply Area is located in the interior part of the Prince Rupert Forest Region in British Columbia. The timber harvesting land base covers 36% of the area's total land base of 736,000 hectares. This document provides an accounting of the factors considered and the rationale employed in determining the volume of timber allowed to be harvested from the area. It reviews the technical limitations of the information used and the guiding principles for the determination, then sets out the factors considered. These include inventory information, growth and yield predictions, the land base contributing to timber harvest, alternative silviculture systems, allowance for decay and waste, constraints imposed by integrated resource management, disease and infestation, and planning delays. An appendix includes a summary of public input to the Bulkley area's Timber Supply Review.

In July 1984, the major portion of the Canadian Security Intelligence Service Act was proclaimed in force. This statute brought into existence a new civilian security intelligence service, and terminated the previous Security Service, which had functioned as part of the RCMP. Passage of the Canadian Security Intelligence Service Act made Canada one of the few western democracies to give its security service an explicit statutory charter. In many ways, it constituted an attempt to bring the security intelligence function under more effective control. This review gives a brief background of the legislation, outlining the significant features of the process that led to its passage. It then deals with the contents of the legislation, and concludes with a treatment of some of its more controversial elements.

In 1992, the European Community Council of Ministers passed legislation that changes the providing of support to the Community's cereals and oilseed producers. The legislation, called the Common Agriculture Policy (CAP) Oilseeds Reform Package, reduces producer prices for all the major cereal and oilseed crops, but provides compensatory payments for each crop to offset these reductions. This study examines the extent to which the payments offset the effects of the price cuts on the production of each crop, i.e. the degree of decoupling of the payments from crop production. The study employs a simple model of European Community crop production which can differentiate between the effects of prices and compensatory payments per hectare. This report presents the model results for scenarios involving price cuts alone, CAP/Oilseeds Reform, and price cuts with fully coupled compensatory payments.

The historic compromise that has governed the establishment and operation of workers' compensation boards in Canada involves the workers giving up the right to sue for damages from workplace injuries and employers agreeing to contribute to a fund for compensation of such injuries, whether or not the employer was at fault. In this compilation of papers, the authors basically support the historic compromise but indicate serious problems with the workers' compensation system and suggest ways of improving it. Topics of these papers include the causes and cures of the escalating costs of the system; financing and pricing of workers' compensation boards; updating the historic compromise; and bipartite governance in the Ontario workers' compensation system.

MICROLOG 95-05528 (1 fiche)

Given that a long-term solution for Port Colborne's waste disposal needs cannot be operational until the year 2000, the city filed an application to amend its Provisional Certificate of Approval for its Elm Street landfill. The amendment would allow the landfill to operate as an interim site for five years and to accept municipal waste generated within Port Colborne by utilization of the current area of operation through vertical expansion. The Ontario Environmental Assessment Board held a mandatory public hearing regarding the city's application. This report describes the landfill site, the preliminary hearing and preparatory process for the public hearing, the proceedings at the hearing, and the Board's evaluation of the issues along with its decision regarding the application. The appendix includes the text of the Provisional Certificate.

To help identify and prioritize service issues for older Torontonians who experience mistreatment, a Metropolitan Toronto committee held focus group sessions and undertook a survey of seniors' services. The committee asked the survey questions in relation to an actual case example of elder abuse. This report documents the process and results of the needs assessment. Responses from service providers concern the following: the types of services offered and whether the providers would accept the case as presented in the survey; potential gaps and barriers to service in cases of elder abuse; the need for protocols for dealing with cases of elder abuse; and service staff training. Responses from focus groups comprising ethno-racial groups, native people, and seniors' advocates and coordination/information services indicate perceived needs for services related to elder abuse.

The report concludes with recommendations on improving such services.

MICROLOG 95-05964 (1 fiche)

This report synthesizes the major results of a field mapping study of the glacial geology of the South Mountain Batholith in central and western Nova Scotia. The researchers collected about 2,100 till samples on a 2-kilometer square grid, analyzed them for a suite of elements, and determined their provenance. The report describes the physiography and geological setting of the study area, the major lithostratigraphic till units mapped, their transport history, and relationship to underlying bedrock geology. Variations within the till units are described with respect to the processes by which units of different ages interact as a result of multi-generation ice flow. Knowledge of these processes is critical to understanding mineral exploration methods in till-covered areas. The researchers also modelled glacial dispersal and clast transport, and use case studies to show how predictions of underlying bedrock type and distance to up-ice bedrock units can be predicted.

This report provides an interpretation of analytical results for dioxins and furans in water, biofilm, sediment, invertebrates, and fish samples collected on the Athabasca and Peace Rivers in 1992. The analysis focused on the partitioning, fate, and bioaccumulation of the two compounds having the greatest potential to accumulate in animal tissue, namely 2,3,7,8-tetrachloro dibenzo-p-dioxin and 2,3,7,8-tetrachloro dibenzofuran, in order to assist in the assessment of ecosystem health and long-term effects. The report compares the levels of these compounds found upstream and downstream from pulp and paper mills, and compares the detected levels to the limits recommended under the Canadian Environmental Quality Guidelines (for sediment and water) and Health Canada guidelines (for fish tissue).

Core French in the classroom, teachers' use of communicative techniques : data from three studies

This paper examines the extent to which teachers incorporated the communicative approach into their French language teaching methodology. The investigators compiled evidence from classroom observations in three school boards, and the paper presents their findings with regard to the types of opportunities students had to practice communicating in French, the amount of French spoken, the use of whole-class or group teaching strategies, and the extent to which formal (teacher-centered) or communicative strategies were used. The paper concludes with a discussions of the obstacles to adoption of the communicative approach.

Counter-based compaction : delay and stuck-open faults

This paper examines the properties of all major counter-based compaction schemes when a circuit under test is affected by delay or stuck-open faults. The authors present an error model that accurately describes the behavior of such circuits. The error model inherits from the asymmetric error model of Altken et al (1989) and the model used by Pilarski et al, 1992. Using the developed mode, the authors compute exact aliasing probability for any test session length and also determine the asymptotic aliasing probability. They include examples that compare aliasing in counter-based compaction with aliasing in linear feedback shift registers.

Every lease contains covenants, or promises which are made by the tenant to the landlord and vice versa. Most covenants are expressed in the lease but some are implied. In Manitoba, the rules which govern covenants in commercial leases are contained in the common law and in sections of the Landlord and Tenant Act. The statutory provisions are expressed in ancient, arcane, and verbose language that is difficult to understand, even by lawyers. In addition, some of the rules that govern covenants in commercial tenancies are inconsistent or needlessly complex. This document reviews the law of covenants in general and Manitoba commercial-tenancy covenant law in particular, and makes recommendations for rewriting the law in modern, clear, and simple language, as well as recommendations for revising certain parts of the law such as those relating to liability, distinctions between types of covenants, and enforcement.

It then examines how the Canadian state has defined social security and the type of interfaces the state has created for its citizens between market and non-market experiences over time. This section includes a review of the history of Canadian social security and recent changes that have seen the state reduce its participation in social support systems. The paper finally examines current policy developments and the vision of human interaction they suggest, and discusses the need to address income redistribution and ensure sufficient employment.

In British Columbia, the Ministry of Forests has the mandate to manage and plan Crown forest and range land resources in the province. At the local level, the Ministry participates in resource planning in cooperation with other government agencies, resource users, and the general public. Local resource plans are flexible but inconsistent across the province. This paper compares the different types of local resource plans currently used, as determined from a survey of typical examples. It summarizes a number of characteristics, including purpose, issues of concern, procedural structure, and provisions for public participation for such plan types as local resource use plans, multiple use plans, wilderness management plans, and recreation corridor plans. Finally, the report discusses and analyzes local resource plans in terms of plan content and structure, planning area characteristics, scope, lead agency, and public participation, and makes recommendations to guide the local planning process.

of improving display performance on X-Windows, compared to the usual display method, without resorting to expensive graphic hardware. They also propose new query processing algorithms for three types of queries on a single polygonal map: to draw a polygonal map within a rectangle, to display all objects within a spatial range, and to display all objects that meet a set of criteria based on their attribute values. In each instance, they propose a query-specific display method which preprocesses all the selected polygons before sending them to X-Windows for display. The paper also describes experiments to gather data for analyzing the trade-off between the computational overhead due to preprocessing and the resulting reduction in X-Windows processing.

Sclerodermis canker, caused by the fungus Gremmeniella abietina (Lagerb.) Morelet, has been regarded as a major pest of pine for over 30 years. The North American race of sclerodermis is associated with numerous pine planting failures in Ontario since the 1950s, while the European race has been restricted by an aggressive system of detection and sanitation. The purpose of this document is to report on the distribution and significance of sclerodermis canker in Ontario since the introduction of the European race, first isolated in Canada in 1978. The report describes the life cycle and epidemiology of the fungus, methods of sclerodermis control, and methods and materials used to detect sclerodermis and identify the race. It then provides maps of Gremmeniella abietina distribution in central Ontario for various time periods, with relevant discussion.

Widely used summary statistical indicators of inequality or the disappearing middle class are potentially misleading. Four kinds of divergence between evidence cited and conclusions claimed are considered. The first is a distinction between the fundamental concepts of inequality and polarization. Second, some measures in wide use do not correspond to the gold standard concept of inequality rankings based on Lorenz curves. Beyond these conceptual problems, claims made about trends in inequality may be inappropriate because they fail to account for sampling variability, or because they should be more clearly circumscribed when only a sub-population like full-time male workers is being considered. For all of these cases of potential divergence, examples are given using Canadian data on labour incomes over the 1967 to 1991 period.

This report analyzes mortality data collected to test the effectiveness of the Ezject herbicide lance, which injects a used .22 cartridge containing 0.22-0.24 grams of glyphosate herbicide into a tree. The lance method for herbicide application is safe to use and environmentally benign, since the herbicide is contained. The lance can also treat a large number of trees quickly. The investigator established five trials for western hemlock, Douglas fir, and lodgepole pine, and developed initial dose-response models for the hemlock and fir. The results contained in the report include the degree of fit of the models to the data, as determined by regression analysis.

The ice subsurface characterization project, a multi-year study of the motion and thickness of sea ice in the Beaufort Sea, was begun in April 1990. This report presents and discusses the measurements made current year of the project. Observations were made using a four-beam Doppler sonar to measure the velocity of ice; movement over the mooring and a narrow-beam ice profiling sonar to measure ice draft. Three sites on the Mackenzie continental shelf were instrumented, one situated near the middle of the shelf, and the other two near the shelf edge. Ice motion measurements were obtained at all sites when sea ice was present.

In the implementation of mandatory testing, the government's interest in safety must be balanced against the individual's interest in her or his privacy. As compulsory drug testing involves the taking of bodily substances, it constitutes the most intrusive infringement of the sanctity of the human body and thus the right to privacy. This paper analyzes the legal issues raised by mandatory drug testing, with particular emphasis of its effect on employees, rights to privacy under the Charter, the Canadian Human Rights Act, the Privacy Act, and federal employment standards legislation (the Canada Labour Code).

Ce projet consiste à évaluer les performances environnementales et mécaniques de la traction Martin utilisée en milieu forestier et plus particulièrement sur transporteur F4-Dion. Le projet vise essentiellement à comparer la productivité d'un F4 Dion avec la nouvelle traction à celle de la machine standard, dans diverses conditions de terrain pendant les périodes estivales et hivernales; et, comparer les perturbations du sol forestier suite à l'utilisation de l'un ou l'autre des équipements.

The Ontario transportation ministry initiated an investigation of potential planting methodologies for wet areas associated with provincial highways. This report presents provisional guidelines developed for establishing wet-area plants, based on a literature survey, discussions with experts, examination of site plans, and visits to selected sites. The report identifies five zones of wetness that determine the extent and types of wetland plants that will grow, and eight wet-area situations adjacent to or associated with highways. Species selection recommendations in the report are based on information from biological inventories in surrounding wet areas. The report concludes with lists of herbaceous and woody species which would be suitable for planting in wet areas along Ontario highways.

Pour aborder ces questions, l'étude est centrée sur trois composantes de la qualité des services. Ce sont la gestion de la qualité, la conformité avec les exigences des clients et la qualité de la vie au travail.

The desire to be spared from prolonged suffering, the increased incidence of incurable diseases such as AIDS and Alzheimer's disease, and a better understanding of how medical technology can prolong life and affect the dying process, among other things, have fuelled the desire to achieve greater control over decisions relating to life and death. These factors have also fostered a renewed interest in euthanasia and cessation of medical treatment. This paper examines the social and legal issues associated with these subjects, especially in the context of the law of Canada, the United States and the Netherlands.

En plus de permettre la diffusion des proportions médianes et des facteurs comparatifs, il fournit également d'autres renseignements favorisant l'analyse et les comparaisons pouvant être réalisées par ses divers usagers. Plus particulièrement, ce recueil contient d'abord un ensemble d'informations générales sur l'évaluation foncière municipale et sur certains indicateurs statistiques qui y sont rattachés. De plus, environ 60 000 données sont agencées sous forme de tableaux portant sur les rôles d'évaluation foncière et les proportions médianes mesurées depuis 1992. Enfin, les annexes insérées dans ce document contiennent divers renseignements sur l'évaluation foncière, compilés par MRC ou communauté urbaine et regroupés par région administrative. Nous y présentons également des statistiques plus particulières touchant les 200 municipalités les plus peuplées du Québec et des informations tirées des rôles de valeur locative en vigueur en 1995.

This study evaluates a remote video surveillance system as an aid to personal inspection of road conditions at a site remote from the highway patrol office and subject to more severe weather conditions than adjacent patrol areas. The investigators compared the reliability of the system in portraying accurate information on road weather conditions by comparing conditions as interpreted from the remote video screen with the true conditions at the site. This report presents the results of the study and an assessment of the costs of the remote monitoring system and of the monetary benefits arising from reductions in travel time, accidents, and direct operating costs.

This study evaluated the waste management practices currently proposed for tailings and waste rock at a proposed mine in the Northwest Territories. In the initial phase of the study, the researchers placed samples of tailings and of waste rock in columns beneath a water cover and subjected them to conditions expected to prevail under the various disposal options being considered. They operated the columns under elevated temperature conditions to accelerate the rate of sulfide oxidation such that one week of laboratory weathering approximates one year in the field. Conditions simulated included wet/dry cycles to represent disposal conditions during mine operations and flooding conditions to represent mine closure. This report presents the results of the study and discusses the implications of the results for predicting and controlling acid rock drainage, and for designing disposal facilities, at the proposed mine.

Alberta Health developed the Adult Day Program Demonstration Project as a measure to assist in helping to maintain the frail elderly in community living arrangements and to avoid the need for entry into long-term care facilities wherever possible and for as long as possible. This study presents the results of an evaluation of the Demonstration Project. The study researchers obtained data from managers of each adult day program in the project, from referral agency managers, from client records, and from interviews with program clients and their caregivers. Information in this report includes a description of the adult day programs studied, a profile of the clients surveyed, client perceptions of outcomes of the program, caregiver profiles, and caregiver outcomes of client attendance. The report also makes recommendations on the role of day programs in the long-term care system in Alberta.

This report describes the results of trials of the Ontario Ministry of Transportation's state-of-the-art ice prediction/detection system. The installation is a computer-based system which provides information about bridge deck and highway surface conditions. The Ministry conducted two winter trials in the Kitchener district to assess the usefulness of the system in providing site-specific information. The trials also evaluated the usefulness of a video camera for remote monitoring of bridge deck conditions. The report also evaluates the cost effectiveness of the Ministry system, based on its ability to detect potentially hazardous icing conditions in time to carry out road salting operations, thereby avoiding costly road accidents.

Conflict resolution is a process for dealing with conflict in the school system and elsewhere. Conflict Resolution programs describe a set of structured activities, skills, and strategies within schools. These include mediation techniques such as peer mediation, and strategies or activities that are intended to be integrated into school curriculum, school discipline, and classroom management. This document discusses a Conflict Resolution Program established by the Board in 1992, after a pilot phase. During the pilot phase and years 1 and 2 (1991-94) the focus was on peer mediation, in which students in conflict meet with students trained in mediation skills and attempt to negotiate a solution. It was envisaged that each year the research would have a different focus and build on the research of the previous years. This report contains results for years 1 and 2. Questionnaires, focus groups and interviews were used for evaluation purposes.

The Columbia River treaty has provisions for Canadian storage of river water to allow joint scheduling of water releases for power generation and flood protection in the United States part of the Columbia basin. When the treaty was signed, the value of side-benefits to agriculture were considered minimal, but this is no longer the case. This report investigates the extent to which the treaty confers downstream irrigation benefits to Washington state farmers, assesses the timing of the delivery of such benefits, and reviews the implications of those benefits on the competitive position of British Columbia agriculture. The first volume of the report summarizes the effects of the downstream benefits to Washington agriculture on British Columbia producers, and the second volume contains the detailed economic and statistical analysis on which the assumptions grounding the evaluation are based.

This paper first discusses the problems of CBOs and their needs for a variety of resources to enable them to reach their goals. It then focuses on the organizational resources that all CBOs must have in order to survive and serve. The kind of practical assistance and capacity-building help which CBOs need to become effective organizations is called facilitation. Finally, the paper presents a set of considerations for using the facilitation approach, including the problem being addressed by the CBO, the client and target groups, goals and tasks of the facilitation, strategy, and evaluation of the effectiveness of facilitation.

Competition policy is defined as those policies and actions of the state intended to prevent certain restraints of trade by private firms. Canadian laws, institutions, and practices regarding anticompetitive measures have a significant impact on the fairness and efficiency of Canadian business and on the ultimate accrual of the benefits of competition to the Canadian public. This volume reviews how Canada's core competition policy institutions and players, notably the Bureau of Competition Policy and the Director of Investigation and Research, have implemented the Competition Act of 1986 and, in the process, have dealt increasingly with cases requiring some measure of economic analysis and judgment, as opposed to criminal prosecution. The volume also examines the experience of other countries and offers an 8-point comparative framework against which to assess competition regimes. It then suggests options for change in a number of areas of Canadian competition policy.

Federal-provincial relations impact upon most of the major activities of government in Canada, and are in a state of virtually continuous evolution. Important sources of change are: the election of new governments with new political priorities and conceptions of the federal-provincial process; the social and political environment, which continuously generates new problems and issues; and accumulated experience with ever more complex intergovernmental relationships, which propels both political and institutional adjustment. This paper reviews major developments on the federal-provincial scene, and relates them to ongoing issues and trends. On this basis, it attempts to anticipate probable directions in federal-provincial relations and in evolving institutions.

This review examines the trends in federal revenues since the Carter Commission report of 1967. It discusses the quest for higher revenues in the early 1970s and the reform measures of that decade, which later substantially reduced government revenues, and goes on to the present government's deficit reduction measures, which have increased the level of taxes, and efforts at tax reform. This review also considers analytical issues related to taxation.

Malgré tout l'intérêt que suscite la condition des femmes au Canada, la situation de ces dernières reste fort différente de celle des hommes, entre autres, sur le plan de la rémunération. Il s'ensuit que les femmes risquent davantage de connaître la pauvreté que les hommes, d'où l'impossibilité pour certaines d'entre elles de se soustraire à la violence conjugale. Ce document se penche précisément sur la situation économique et les autres questions d'actualité relatives aux femmes au Canada. On y examine les points suivants : pour mieux comprendre l'inégalité; les raisons de l'inégalité des sexes; les problèmes économiques; et, les problèmes sociaux.

Field trials of pre-wetted sand for winter maintenance

By M.S. Perchanok...et al. Downsview, ON : Ministry of Transportation, Research and Development Branch, 1995. iv, 37 p. : Ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-05421 (1 fiche)

Sand is applied to provide traction on Ontario highways during winter when temperature or other conditions prohibit chemical and mechanical de-icing. Under some conditions, sand is blown off the road surface by traffic soon after it is applied, requiring repeated or continuous application. This study examines whether the retention of sand on the road surface can be increased through the use of a pre-wetting agent which is coated on the sand before it is applied to the road. The investigators evaluated the effectiveness of pre-wetting by comparing the deceleration rate of vehicles on highway surfaces where treated and untreated sand had been applied. This report presents the results of the study concerning the ability of pre-wetting to improve sand retention on an icy road surface.

In this study, the investigators applied selected functions for modelling the creep behavior of polymers to creep data previously obtained at 25 degrees C for polymethyl methacrylate, polyvinyl chloride, and polyethylene. The investigators used nonlinear regression analysis to determine which functions gave the best possible fit for modelling the creep behavior of those polymers. They also employed the time-stress superposition principle to construct master curves for the secondary creep of the polymers, and established log-log relationships between initial stress and master curve shift factor in order to facilitate extrapolation of the master curves to other stress levels. This paper presents the results of the study, including discussion of rupture life prediction methods for the polymers tested. CA ND PS SC

The fully allocated cost of service (FACOS) study provides an estimate, on an embedded cost basis, of the annual cost to serve each of BC Hydro's rate classes. The primary purpose of the study is to provide an indication of the extent by which revenues, contributed by a particular class, recover the allocated costs of serving that rate class. The secondary purpose is to provide information for decisions on rate design. Wheeling services, which differ from the transmission function classification in the FACOS, and other unbundled services are not separately analyzed. This document is in 3 sections, the report, the service schedules, and a consultants review and critique of the study. The 6 schedules give comparison of revenue with allocated revenue requirement, unit cost, functional classification, allocation, basic data, and reconciliation with financial statements.

Government funding for arts and culture in Canada has long been linked to creation of a strong, distinct national identity. In the context of the recent economic climate and government cutbacks, there has been an increasingly strong emphasis on economic arguments to promote arts and culture funding by governments. This paper outlines the parameters of this shift in arguments around cultural and arts funding, from the Massey Report of 1951 through the Applebaum/Hebert Report of 1982 to the early 1990s. It then reviews studies that estimate the economic impact of arts and culture, notes the Ontario government approach to arts and culture, and summarizes studies and opinions regarding private funding of the arts.

The objective of this study is to examine expected food and non-food demand in the dairy and poultry sectors over a five to ten year planning horizon in order to facilitate the development of policies and programs that will foster competitiveness and adaptation in those sectors. The study reviews the global context of the Canadian agri-food industry and the factors affecting food demand, and includes statistics on trends in Canadian food consumption. The factors discussed include consumer attitudes, the impact of biotechnology, animal welfare issues, international trade agreements, and competition from alternative dairy and poultry products. The study then attempts to analyze the implications of those factors on the Canadian dairy and poultry sectors and assesses possible opportunities for new products or food technologies. Statistics on the Canadian dairy and poultry industries are appended.

This paper summarizes the responses to the first questionnaire in a Delphi survey concerning future environmental directions for Alberta. The paper begins with an overview of the survey and the demographics of the survey participants. It then discusses the participants' views on the key factors that will drive Alberta toward a sustainable future and their views on what Alberta's environment will be like in 20 years. The paper also summarizes responses to environmental issues such as agricultural impacts, declines in biodiversity, alternatives to environmental regulation, environmental threats to health, forest management, land degradation, global warming, energy, urban air pollution, and water quality. Finally, the paper reviews responses to environmental opportunities such as economic instruments, community planning, global information sharing, and ecotourism, as well as to new issues and opportunities identified by the participants.

This paper summarizes the results of a survey of representatives from government, industry, academia, interest groups, and the general public on various questions related to Alberta's environmental future. Issues considered in the survey were: the factors (such as public participation, the environment itself, and the economy) that would drive Alberta's progress toward sustainable development; the state of Alberta's environment in 20 years; and investment in a sustainable environmental future. The survey also presented participants with 23 specific environmental issues and opportunities, and asked respondents to suggest actions or initiatives to address those issues. Respondents also identified new issues and ranked them in importance, and indicated issues and opportunities that are now overlooked but which could become significant in the near future.

The Task Force on Greater Montreal was essentially concerned with how responsibility for planning and management within the region's metropolitan areas should be shared among the various levels of government. The Task Force published a final report covering a variety of planning, transportation, economic, social, environment, and governance issues, and made proposed a future vision for Montreal and its region. The Canadian Urban Institute organized a conference to bring the Task Force's work to the attention of those interested in the future of the Greater Toronto Area. Conference presentations and discussions brought out many of the lessons that the Montreal exercise offers to those contemplating the Toronto region's future. This report is a slight abridgement of the conference proceedings. It includes panelist reactions to the Task Force report and a summary of the principal Task Force recommendations.

Lorsque le rapport Dunkel a été disposé en décembre 1991, le Canada s'est rendu compte que les propositions de réforme agricole qu'il renferme seraient difficiles à faire accepter à ses agriculteurs. La levée des boucliers qui a suivi la présentation des propositions est venue confirmer les craintes du gouvernement fédéral. Ce document se penche précisément sur le rapport Dunkel et les politiques agricoles canadiennes, et examine : l'accès aux marchés, la concurrence à l'exportation, la gestion de l'offre, la tarification et la gestion de l'offre, les répercussions de la tarification, la position du Canada, les répercussions du rapport Dunkel sur la production de céréales dans l'ouest, l'impact sur le marché des céréales, la subvention du Nid-de-Corbeau, et la Commission canadienne du blé.

In December 1991, Arthur Dunkel, Director General of GATT, tabled a report containing proposals designed to serve as a basis for a final agreement on world trade. When the Dunkel Report was released, Canada realized that it would be difficult to get its producers to agree to the agricultural reform proposals that had been put forward. The hostile reaction to the proposals confirmed this fear. This document describes the Dunkel report. It focuses on access to markets, export competition, domestic support, and sanitary and phytosanitary measures. It also presents information on supply management, tariffication and supply management, the impact of tariffication, Canada's position, the impact of the Dunkel report on western grain production, the Crow benefit, and the Canadian Wheat Board.

The space requirements of a parallel program may be spectacularly different from those of an equivalent sequential program. This study assumes that each parallel program has an underlying sequential execution order that may be used as a basis for judging storage requirements. The author proposes a restriction that is sufficient to ensure that any program that will run in n units of space on m processors. The paper shows whether it is possible to transform a program to one that satisfies this restriction, and whether some potential parallelism may be lost in the transformation. The paper also develops a method to ensure that all programs meet the restrictions by imposing certain features, and develops a space scheduling strategy that will be within a factor of two of being optimal with respect to time.

MICROLOG 95-05735 (3 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

This guide is a reference on adequate standards of living for specific categories of family expenditures, primarily intended for use in counselling families or individuals on money management. The guide can also be used as a reference for authorities and organizations that provide financial assistance. The guide presents living costs in the form of budgets (prices effective for June 1991) covering family food requirements, shelter costs, clothing, home upkeep, health care, personal care, transportation, and certain discretionary expenditures such as education and recreation. The guide also contains notes about special circumstances, achieving economies, and the use of credit; a directory of social services in the Toronto area; sample budgets for various households; and a summary discussion of the costs associated with raising children.

Guides for family budgeting : 1994 updates, including 15 sample budgets for different families in the Toronto area

Toronto : Social Planning Council of Metropolitan Toronto, 1994. 23 p. : ill. Cover title: Updated sample family budgets, 1994. ISBN 0-919456-89-8
MICROLOG 95-05751 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

This document is an update of the sample budgets section of the Guides for family budgeting, 1991 to reflect prices and costs as of May 1994, while omitting the detailed re-pricing and descriptions of family expenditure categories which has accompanied previous editions. The Guides are mainly intended for use in counselling families and individuals on money management, but are also used as a reference for organizations providing financial assistance. This update first analyzes price changes and tax/transfer changes affecting families in the Metro Toronto area, then provides sample budgets for various types of Metro Toronto households. The budgets include typical monthly and yearly expenditures for such items as food, housing, clothing, health and personal care, transportation, and recreation.

Après avoir pensé que l'harmonisation des taxes de vente se réaliserait, Ottawa a soudainement vu le climat se détériorer en toute fin d'année 1991, et jusqu'à tout récemment, il était évident que les probabilités que l'harmonisation des taxes provinciales et de la taxe fédérale se fasse un jour étaient très faibles. La situation est toutefois peut-être en train d'évoluer. Dans ce document, nous cherchons à évaluer la possibilité que dans un proche avenir, l'harmonisation des taxes de vente provinciales et de la taxe sur les produits et services se fasse.

Before the Goods and Services Tax came into effect on January 1, 1991, the provinces vigorously opposed its introduction and the idea of harmonizing it with their own respective retail sales taxes. They accused the federal government of encroaching on the area of consumption taxes, which they considered to come within exclusively provincial jurisdiction. Moreover, it made sense for the provinces to avoid associating themselves with the federal government on the GST, given the political price that would have to be paid at election time for introducing such a very unpopular tax. This document attempts to assess the likelihood of such harmonization in the near future.

This paper begins with a description of the health system in Hawaii, which offers universal coverage, lower costs than elsewhere in the United States, and good health outcomes. The paper then describes ongoing reforms in Oregon, where the state has expanded the number of people with health insurance to include working poor but has specified the range of treatments that will be covered. Finally, the paper reviews reform proposals in Minnesota, Florida, and Vermont as typical of the more incremental reforms likely to be pursued at the state level in the near future.

In 1994, the Newfoundland Economic Recovery Commission established a working group to investigate the economic development potential within the province's health industry. The group directed its research toward the following sectors: medical devices, biotechnology, toxicology, technical services, health services research, clinical trials, basic science research, education and training, and information and communications. Primary research included an in-depth focus group with industry participants, academics, researchers, and health professionals. This report presents the findings of the research, including a review of the province's health industry and of the economics of health care, areas of health service which should be developed because of the province's existing strengths, and recommendations for improving the industry's economic potential.

The state of Oregon has developed a unique and inventive model for addressing the rapidly rising costs and grossly inequitable access to health care in the United States. The state's medical plan is designed to cover a defined range of medical services for the whole population. Under this plan, a list of conditions and their treatments was developed after extensive public consultation, the procedures were ranked in order of priority, and the state is to cover as many of these procedures as it can afford. This paper describes the Oregon health plan model and its current state of implementation, then explores some of the plan's advantages and drawbacks. The paper then discusses elements of the plan which may be usefully examined in Canada.

This paper examines the historical development of public funding for Ontario's Roman Catholic separate schools, including funding changes that occurred with enactment of the Education Amendment Act of 1986 and the Education Statute Law Amendment Act of 1989. It outlines the history of school funding, the bilingual schools issue, the issue of grade levels in separate schools, growing enrolment and financial problems, and the position of political parties on the issue 1969-84. The paper concludes with a discussion of persisting inequalities in funding of public and separate school boards, and lists recommendations made by the Royal Commission on Learning to address the remaining disparities in funding.

The objective of this paper is to outline what the impact would be on the dairy industry should the Market Sharing Quota (MSQ) be further reduced and what can be done to avoid such cuts. The first part sketches some of the current problems affecting the industry and what factors have led to the present situation. The second part of the paper analyzes the impact of a decrease of MSQ on producers, processors and the retailing and distribution sectors. The value of quota and the financial outlay to farmers, should they want to maintain production after a quota cut, will be considered. The final part looks at ways to avoid quota cuts, through moderations in prices for specific products such as butter and cheese, or by establishing special classes of milk per specific products. The paper also looks at ways to reduce the cost of producing milk.

The amendments to the Criminal Code of Canada and the Canada Evidence Act that came into effect with Bill C-15 mainly concerned issues of sexual assault but also addressed the situation of persons with communication disabilities. The objective of this paper is to examine the impact of Bill C-15 on those persons with communication disabilities (PWCD) who have been involved in the criminal justice process. The report reviews the problem of the vulnerability to criminal acts of PWCD and the problems encountered in receiving their evidence in court. The report then presents results of a survey of individuals professionally active in the criminal justice system who have had significant experience in dealing with the problems encountered by PWCD in that system. Finally, the report assesses the effectiveness of present law and practice, and suggests further reforms that should be considered. An appendix contains an outline of the existing law of evidence in criminal proceedings that is of primary concern to PWCD.

Changing the method of payment of the Western Grain Transportation Act (WGTA) involves a com-

This study examines three options for changing the method of payment in the WGTA and analyzes the effect of those options on the Canadian cattle industry. In the first option, grain producers receive a direct payment and bear full compensatory shipping rates. The second option uses current WGTA rates but changes the pooling basis for Canadian Wheat Board grains transactions. In the third option, grain producers are paid directly, bear full compensatory shipping rates, and the pooling basis is changed from Thunder Bay to St Lawrence. This report presents the results of the study, including quantitative estimates of the impact on prices, production, trade, and income for the eastern and western cattle and beef sector.

The authors show how the query processor of DSQL, a customized query language, is implemented using ObjectStore, an object-oriented database system. The authors implement the query processor to run on top of Sybase, a relational database management system, and compare its performance to that of the ObjectStore implementation. They also compare the performance of the ObjectStore implementation to the relational implementation when the relations from the Sybase server are preloaded into the virtual memory space of the query processor.

Le premier chapitre de cette étude évalue l'importance de l'industrie québécoise du bois de sciage de feuillus. Après avoir exposé la structure et la localisation régionale de l'industrie, les livraisons sont analysées selon l'essence, la qualité des sciages et leurs destinations. Dans le deuxième chapitre, il est question des approvisionnements en matière première. Le rendement matière et les coûts de transformation de la matière première sont deux des quatre sujets abordés dans le troisième chapitre. Le quatrième chapitre traite de la production et du commerce mondial. Le cinquième et dernier chapitre tente d'identifier les possibilités de développement pour les bois feuillus nord-américains et québécois selon les marchés et les produits en tenant compte des contraintes de disponibilité et de qualité de la matière première et des tendances à venir.

The intent of this classroom based research was to describe how several teaching/learning models were integrated to enhance the learning opportunities of students in a multi-aged classroom. The information for this action paper was collected using a variety of methods: students maintained their own learning profiles, math data records, and writing folders; parent handbooks were sent home containing support documents for the innovations and the teaching philosophy; parents were encouraged to respond in the handbook via the comment section and share their concerns; teachers and researchers kept a comprehensive anecdotal file on each student; and a third party observer followed the progress of the students for a 6-week period to provide further observations. This information was used to check on the student's learning styles and update their learning profiles. Students were tested in the focus area of mathematics and language arts, and re-tested in June to measure their individual learning. The data and research findings presented in this paper reflect the thoughts and concerns of parents, students, teachers, and teacher candidates.

By Daryl Swettliff and Alison Coyne. Victoria : Ministry of Forests, Economics & Trade Branch, 1995. viii, 97 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-05891 (2 fiche)

This report profiles the Invermere Timber Supply Area in British Columbia and discusses the potential socio-economic and environmental implications associated with three harvest scenarios chosen to represent a range of possible impacts. The profile includes descriptions of the physical environment, natural resources, communities in the area and their demographics, First Nation communities, and the various sectors of the local economy. For the forest sector, the report describes the timber harvesting land base and current forest management practices. The three scenarios used in the forecasts of future timber supplies all involve a decline from the current annual allowable cut, but the timing of the decline is different in each scenario. Appendices include a glossary, a description of the methodology used to calculate impacts, and a table of decade-by-decade cumulative economic impacts by scenario.

Kernel/congruence semantics, a homogeneous treatment of some asymmetry problems in the model theory of logic programming

MICROLOG 95-05826 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

This paper introduces a style of semantics for logic programs called kernel/congruence semantics. The kernel/congruence approach solves two problems in logic programming semantics: the problem of the Clark-Andreka-Nemeti anomaly that makes success and failure asymmetric, and more significantly, the problem of characterizing the gap between breadth-first and depth-first processing of queries. The essence of the approach is the definition of a kernel of queries which succeed or fail with respect to any program, and the definition of the set of successful or failing queries for a given program via the fold/unfold congruence suggested by that program. The paper presents the basic results about kernels and discusses the technical and philosophical ramifications of the kernel/congruence semantics. It also presents breadth-first semantics in a form which is very close to that of the depth-first semantics.

Depuis les travaux de la Commission royale d'enquête sur le bilinguisme et le biculturalisme, la politique fédérale en matière de langues officielles est associée à la préservation de l'unité du pays. L'enchaînement des droits linguistiques dans la Constitution en 1982 a ouvert une nouvelle page de l'évolution dans ce domaine au Canada. Ce bulletin d'actualité porte sur les trois composantes essentielles de la politique fédérale en matière de langues officielles, soit les droits linguistiques protégés par la Constitution, la Loi sur les langues officielles de 1988 et l'appui au développement des minorités de langue officielle.

The Belledune lead smelter in northeast New Brunswick has been operating since 1966. This paper presents data on the concentrations of the four primary metals emitted from the smelter which were measured in the terrestrial environment near the smelter and the ore concentrate transport route. Parts of the ecosystem monitored include vegetation, snow, drinking water, plants, soils, and animals. Concentrations of the metals as revealed in community and occupational health studies are also reported. The report discusses the deposition of these metals and their potential effects in relation to non-regulatory guidelines, toxicity, and atmospheric emissions. The report also includes recommendations regarding ecosystem monitoring and community health studies.

The Legal status of the child born outside of marriage in Nova Scotia : final report

Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia. Halifax : The Commission, 1995. x, 94 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-05870 (2 fiche)

The Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia examined provincial laws to determine what changes are needed in order to eliminate existing discrimination in the law against children born outside marriage. The Commission believes such changes are necessary in view of changes in family structures, the advent of assisted conception technologies, and the need to ensure that provincial laws are not contrary to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. This report describes the background and current status of laws relating to children born outside marriage and presents the Commission's recommendations on reforming these laws. The recommendations are primarily in the form of a new law, the draft Status of the Child Act, included at the end of this report.

The high incidence of family support default fuels a continuing need for effective tools to ensure the adequate and regular payment of family support. Accordingly, various jurisdictions have introduced new enforcement tools, one of which links the granting of government-issued licenses to compliance with support orders. This paper surveys the licensing withholding or revocation measures in Alberta, Nova Scotia, and three U.S. states selected to illustrate different aspects of such measures. It also reviews preliminary evidence regarding the effectiveness of the measures in the collection of support arrears and enforcement of support orders. Finally, the paper discusses important policy issues that surround the decision to implement license revocation to enforce support orders, including the main arguments in favor and against implementation.

The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms came into force on April 17, 1982. The legal rights guaranteed by the Charter are contained in sections 7 to 14. These sections deal with such matters as the right to life, liberty and security; the right to be secure against unreasonable search and seizure; the rights of an accused upon arrest; the right of an accused to certain proceedings in criminal and penal matters; and the right not to be subject to cruel and unusual punishment. This document looks at these very issues. It focuses on the interpretation of an entrenched charter and fundamental justice.

This report presents the data, results, and interpretations of a four-year lithogeochemical study of the Archean supracrustal rocks of the Whiskey Lake greenstone belt in Ontario. The main goal of the study was to assess the economic mineral potential of the belt, thus providing a comprehensive lithogeochemical database to assist in exploration. A detailed surface geology mapping program complements the study, and the completed database resulting from analysis of 952 rock grab samples was used to produce lithogeochemical maps which are included in the original report. The report describes the analytical methodology, regional geology, features of the lithogeochemical maps, anomalies observed, the role of rare earth minerals as a guide to base metal mineralization, and areas of exploration interest in the study region. An appendix includes major element data of the rock samples.

This paper addresses the following questions using a historical approach: whether a removal of Ontario school boards in their present form would imply a fundamental shift in how the province carries out the delivery of education; whether the provincial reaction to local school boards is a result of the boards, not dependent on provincial funds, refusing to follow provincial directives and thereby undermining provincial authority; whether the proposed sweeping changes in the school system are different from the past or merely a return to an earlier system of education governance; and the possible systems of governance that the province should be considering. The paper discusses important issues pertaining to school board restructuring and gives examples of changes in United States and New Zealand school boards.

The Matrimonial home

Edmonton : Alberta Law Reform Institute, 1995. iv, 212 p. : Bibl. (Report for discussion / Alberta Law Reform Institute ; no. 14 ISSN 0834-9037) ISBN 0-8886-4196-6 MICROLOG 95-05380 (3 fiche)

This report examines the ways in which the matrimonial home can provide a means of support for married, divorced, and widowed spouses, and proposes reforms to the law presently contained in Alberta's Dower Act and the Matrimonial Property Act. The report begins with a brief history of dower law and matrimonial property legislation in Alberta, then reviews the law governing the right of occupancy of a matrimonial home. Further chapters consider dower life estate and its reform, transfer of the home and rules for consent, contracts relating to rights in the home, division of the matrimonial home, exemption from seizure, and how the matrimonial home should be defined. The report concludes with recommendations regarding transitional provisions for the proposed reforms. AL JU PR SA SS

Chaque programme fait l'objet d'une description des objectifs, des critères d'admissibilité, des mesures et des coûts pour l'année civile 1993. La première partie de ce bilan comprend un portrait des grands changements que les gouvernements fédéral et provincial ont apportés dans le système d'aide aux familles. La deuxième partie traite des principales mesures de transfert mises en place pour subvenir aux besoins des enfants ou pour soutenir les parents avant et après la venue d'un enfant. La dernière partie décrit quelques mesures fiscales introduites par les deux paliers de gouvernement pour venir en aide aux familles. PA PR QU SA SS ST

Mesures d'inégalité divergentes : théorie, résultats empiriques et recommandations

Par Michael C. Wolfson. Ottawa : Statistique Canada, Direction des études analytiques, 1995. 28 p. : ill., Bibl. (Documents de recherche / Statistique Canada. Certains indicateurs statistiques largement utilisés concernant l'inégalité et la disparité de la classe moyenne sont peut-être trompeurs. Quatre types de divergences entre les conclusions tirées et les données citées sont examinés. Premièrement, il existe une distinction entre les concepts fondamentaux d'inégalité et de polarisation. Deuxièmement, certaines mesures d'usage répandu ne respectent pas le concept du classement de l'inégalité selon les courbes de Lorenz, qui est le critère par excellence dans ce domaine. Au-delà de ces problèmes conceptuels, certaines affirmations relatives aux tendances de l'inégalité sont peut-être inexactes parce qu'elles ne tiennent pas compte de la variabilité d'échantillonnage, ou parce qu'elles ne font pas l'objet des réserves qui s'imposent, quand seulement une sous-population, par exemple les travailleurs à plein temps de sexe masculin, est examinée. Pour toutes ces possibilités de divergences, des exemples utilisant des données canadiennes sur les revenus du travail pour la période 1967-1991 sont présentés. CA CO DE SA SS

The mandate of the Task Force on Greater Montreal included diagnosis of problems relating to territorial organization, formulation of a future vision for Montreal and its region, and recommendation of future actions. The Task Force held work sessions, consultations, and public hearings, and published a progress report that identified challenges to Greater Montreal's future. Those challenges represent the basic framework of this final report, which begins by stating the driving vision of the Montreal city-region that guided the Task Force. The report then proposes a new municipal organization based on joining of regional forces, as well as a new pattern of relations between the city-region and government. It also discusses new directions to be taken with a view to sustainable, coordinated development in the areas of planning, tourism, economic development, environment, culture and arts, transportation, and public safety; the financing of municipal functions and improving the efficiency of public services; and the particular problem of Montreal as a core city.

Productivity measures are important for monitoring the performance of the Canadian agricultural sector and are also relevant to the development of policies and programs designed to enhance agricultural productivity. Multifactor productivity indexes relate output to a weighted sum of all inputs based on their relative importance in production, and are far more comprehensive than partial productivity measures. This report presents estimates of multifactor productivity indexes for Canadian agriculture, 1961-90, and analyzes the trends, growth rates, and sources of productivity growth and changes. The report compares multifactor productivity growth rates with similar measures for United States agriculture and other sectors of the Canadian economy. The report concludes with some implications for the 1990s.

By Gordon Wells. Toronto : Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, 1987. 23 p. : Bibl. ON-TERIS ON06657
MICROLOG 95-05983 (1 fiche)

This paper discusses the way children learn to talk and people learn to negotiate meaning and recommends ways in which adults should treat children's utterances to encourage them to communicate and learn in the process. The paper provides examples from a study of dialogues between children and their mothers to demonstrate that talking and learning occur simultaneously and spontaneously. The paper then compares home with classroom interaction in regard to such matters as frequency of utterances, initiation of conversations, complexity of sentences, and the likelihood of a child's having the meaning of an utterance extended by an adult. Finally, the paper explains the role of the transmission model of teaching in teacher-student communication problems and suggests ways for teachers to increase their understanding of how children learn and of what individuals already know and can do.

This manual is intended for social workers and counsellors who come into contact with people who have a mental handicap, and is designed to lead to the prevention of the sexual abuse of such people. The manual explains the nature of mental handicap and sexual abuse, illustrated by personal stories of mentally handicapped who were affected by abuse. The manual then reviews the signs of sexual abuse and the provisions of Canadian law as it relates to the sexual abuse of mentally handicapped people. It presents principles to guide prevention of sexual abuse of people with a mental handicap, sex education and personal safety education, and prevention of sexual abuse in group homes and other residential settings. Finally, the manual lists what to do in cases of abuse, presents guidelines on counselling and on determining the accessibility of community services, and outlines an action plan. Appendices include a suggested curriculum for a training event for social workers and counsellors.

Non-convexities and efficiency of equilibria in insurance markets with asymmetric information

In two articles by Crocker and Snow (1985, 1986), the authors studied the efficiency of equilibria in insurance markets with adverse selection. To show the correspondence between equilibrium and efficiency, they use the fact that the frontier of efficiency points in the income-states space is always strictly concave. In the present paper, the authors propose a sufficient condition to obtain a strictly convex efficiency frontier in the income-states space, and present their main result concerning the maintenance of the relationship between efficiency and market equilibrium. They also demonstrate the shape of the second-best efficiency frontier in the expected utility space and discuss how the results may affect their conclusions about the efficiency of risk categorization.

This study was undertaken to determine annual runoff from all major basins of British Columbia from 1961 to 1993, with 1961-90 selected as the normal period. That 30-year period corresponds to the climatological standard for comparison and temperature and precipitation, and can be used to compare runoff in future years with an accepted base period. According to the study method, the province was divided into 19 geographically separate basins, and runoff was determined for each year (1961-93). Missing data were estimated by graphical correlation and comparisons with other similar gauged watersheds. Data were also corrected for major storage, diversion, and runoff originating from outside the province. This report indicates specific estimation procedures used in each basin and tabulates the estimated annual runoff for each basin by year, in cubic meters per second, plus total runoff for all basins.

This paper analyzes papermaking mineral pigment market trends in western North America, with special emphasis on the potential for talc utilization in papermaking and current limitations to such use. The paper presents statistics and discussion of the consumption of filler and extender minerals in general and in the paper industry, noting the limited usage of talc in North American papermaking compared to Europe and the major factors inhibiting a wider use of talc. The paper also describes technical aspects of using talc in papermaking and notes the positive attributes of the mineral in enhancing paper product quality. Finally, the paper evaluates the potential western North American growth in talc usage for paper manufacture, provided that technical and economic constraints on talc utilization can be overcome.

La question de l'orientation sexuelle présente deux aspects juridiques fondamentaux, à savoir l'interdiction de toute discrimination fondée sur l'orientation sexuelle, ce qui vise à protéger les homosexuels et les lesbiennes contre tout acte discriminatoire, et la reconnaissance des relations homosexuelles, ce qui entraîne l'attribution, aux personnes vivant dans une telle relation, d'avantages et de garanties identiques à ceux qui sont reconnus aux personnes vivant dans une relation hétérosexuelle. Dans ce document, nous examinons quelques-unes des questions juridiques qui ont trait à l'orientation sexuelle au Canada. Nous mettons surtout l'accent sur les faits survenus au niveau fédéral et au Parlement, mais nous faisons également état de ce qui se passe en la matière aux niveaux provincial et local ainsi que dans le secteur privé. Notre propos vise les aspects et les questions juridiques.

Ortho-cognition : the nature and development of systematic thinking

By David R. Olson. Toronto : Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, 1994. 10 p. : Bibl. (OISE project / Ontario Institute for Studies in Education ; 84-0939) ONTERIS ON07539 MICROLOG 95-05985 (1 fiche)

Describes a project which set out to examine the possibility that a 'language for thinking' is acquired developmentally and has an impact on children's thinking. Although still puzzled by some concepts, the researchers made progress on children's understanding of concepts of claims and evidence and of statements and paraphrases, and tied some of these developments to the development of a literate orientation to language, specifically, attention to form rather than meaning. The project's long-term goal was to show that schooling and schooled knowledge differ from ordinary cognition and ordinary uses of oral speech; this special use is referred to as ortho-cognition. Refers to publications which summarize and develop this view. Describes the usefulness of the project in training students as researchers, the research team itself, the international aspects of the project, preservation of and access to the data, and issues or problems. Lists communications activities connected with the project, including books, scholarly articles, conference papers, media productions, lectures, awards, and completed theses resulting primarily from the program.

Orthogonal projection based algorithms for convex cost transportation problems with serial and parallel implementations transports ; no. 95-31) (Publication / Université de Montréal. Département d'informatique et de recherche opérationnelle ; no. 979) MICROLOG 95-05745 (1 fiche)

This paper considers the solution of minimum convex cost capacitated transportation problems. The authors develop a general primal-dual algorithm which includes known algorithms as special cases. For the case when a bipartite network is complete and the objective function is quadratic (orthogonal), they present a new solution method which consists of a sequence of analytical form projections onto the conservation of flow constraints and then onto the bound constraints. To solve a general convex cost transportation problem, the authors develop a partially linearized proximal method, equivalent to the projected gradient algorithm, where at each iteration a feasible descent direction is obtained by solving an orthogonal projection subproblem. The authors demonstrate the efficiency of the algorithm by numerical experiments carried out with sequential and parallel implementations.

By Jane Fraser. Ajax, ON : Ontario Educational Research Council, 1993. 23 p. : Bibl. ONTERIS ON06945 MICROLOG 95-05986 (1 fiche)

Discusses 31 adult students on an aboriginal island reserve, who were interested in completing computer instruction on keyboarding in their own environment. Some of the more advanced students served as peer tutors and were also given the opportunity to complete complex, abstract and theoretical assignments. Throughout the course the support of the community was evident among both the students and the friends and relatives who visited the classroom to view the successes. Weekly progress reports were issued by the facilitators so that students would understand where they were on the continuum. The textbooks were all written to provide step-by-step instruction, enabling students to work at their own pace. Collectively, the students worked well with each other to achieve their goals, while the instructor was primarily a facilitator.

The issue of poor access to physician resources in northern, rural, and underserved areas of Ontario is part of a larger concern of inequitable access to health care services. This paper begins by examining the current distribution and mix of physicians in rural and underserved parts of Ontario, then assesses the barriers and problems facing medical practitioners who work in those areas. The paper reviews possible responses to those problems, including fostering an interest in medicine among rural students, attracting health care students to underserved areas, improving training for rural practice, and removing barriers to continuing medical education. Finally, the paper evaluates the effects of various public policies on improving medical services for underserved areas in Ontario.

It assesses the impacts on human and biosphere health from excessive ultraviolet-B that would result from a depletion of the atmospheric ozone layer, and examines the evidence showing the extent of ozone layer damage caused by man-made agents. The paper then outlines the types of ozone-destroying agents possibly present in the upper atmosphere, notably the chlorofluorocarbon compounds, and the technological alternatives to using such agents. Finally, the paper summarizes actions taken to reduce amounts of ozone-destroying agents, including international agreements, Canadian federal-provincial action, and federal initiatives, as well as actions that still need to be taken.

Howard Gardner (1993) has proposed that intelligence can be demonstrated in any of seven dimensions: linguistic-verbal, logical-mathematical, visual-spatial, bodily-kinesthetic, musical-rhythmic, social-interpersonal, and solidarity-intrapersonal. He believes that intelligence can be demonstrated in any of these dimensions and that it is possible to be highly intelligent in one but not in any others. This paper reports an attempt to determine whether Gardner's multiple intelligence dimensions could be identified by students and their teachers. Teachers nominated 34 grade eight students and the researchers used thinking-aloud protocols in interviewing these students, who read aloud and ranked seven scenarios. Each scenario demonstrated dominant characteristics of one of Gardner's dimensions. The results indicate the degree of agreement between teacher nominations and the perceived cognitive interests of the students, as based on Gardner's multiple intelligence profiles.

PLA policy discussion on transcription -- Draft

Ontario Council of Regents for Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology. Prior Learning Assessment Advisory Committee. Toronto : The Committee, 1993. 12 p. ONTERIS ON07561
MICROLOG 95-05608 (1 fiche)

This paper discusses the scope of prior learning assessment (PLA) grading and transcription policy, whether it should be local or system-wide, and the actual grading and transcription of PLA credits. The paper notes that policy development is required in these areas because the Ontario education ministry has not addressed recommendations that credits gained through PLA be graded and transcribed similarly through credits earned through course-work. The paper lists possible policy objectives and discusses the scope and urgency of the issue, key stakeholders, factors of principle, access, equity, and consistency, quality and accountability, and the current situation. The paper also notes the two potentially conflicting views of the purpose of a transcript and lists options on the issues under discussion.

Le parc provincial du lac Supérieur est un parc naturel d'une superficie de 155 659 hectares, situé sur la rive est très accidentée du lac Supérieur. Le parc a été aménagé en 1944, à la suite d'un décret visant à protéger une vaste partie des berges du lac Supérieur entre Sault Ste. Marie et Wawa. Le plan directeur (de gestion) original du parc provincial du lac Supérieur a été approuvé en 1979. Une étude de plan a été commencée en 1988, au cours de laquelle des propositions de gestion et d'aménagement du parc ont été présentées au public pour obtenir des commentaires. Ce document réitère certaines des politiques contenues dans le plan de 1979 et présente de nouvelles politiques afin de répondre aux objectifs de protection, d'appréciation du patrimoine, de loisirs et de tourisme qui seront visés pendant les dix prochaines années.

A prior learning assessment (PLA) system evaluates learning obtained outside the college system and relates it to college courses and programs. Using PLA, adult candidates who can demonstrate or document that they have achieved the objectives of a given course may be given formal college credit. PLA seeks to enhance the flexibility and efficiency of the colleges while encouraging adults to further their education and training by respecting adults' experience and reducing the time needed to complete a program. This discussion paper proposes a model for a PLA system for Ontario's colleges, outlines some of the academic and financial issues that surround the development of PLA, and proposes some directions. The paper examines four major categories of PLA methods: challenge exams, standardized tests, course or program evaluations, and portfolios of experience and skills developed by candidates. The paper also proposes a PLA coordinating and advisory council.

The Wildlife Branch initiated this problem analysis to identify and develop habitat enhancement objectives and recommendations that would maintain the biodiversity of the Chilcotin-Cariboo grasslands in British Columbia. The analysis identified species and habitats of concern, existing and potential habitat conflicts between wildlife requirements and grassland management programs, and priority habitats and species for future enhancement programs by means of interviews with resource managers, naturalists, ranchers, and local First Nations. This report presents the results of the analysis and includes lists of known plant and wildlife species in the study area, recommendations regarding concerns and needs for grassland biodiversity conservation, and a working plan for Chilcotin-Cariboo grassland biodiversity conservation using a habitat approach.

Professional growth plan for teachers

Markdale, ON : Grey County Board of Education, 1989. 40 p. : Ill. ONTERIS ON07127
MICROLOG 95-05614 (1 fiche)

The Grey County Professional Growth Plan is a framework within which teachers address their professional goals and their questions about classroom practice. It provides the opportunity for teachers at different stages of their careers, and with different goals or preferences for professional interaction, to engage in activities that have the greatest potential to enhance their professionalism. The model is based on the belief that professionalism has both personal and collective dimensions. Teachers on permanent contract with the Grey County Board of Education have the following options for professional growth: peer coaching, clinical supervision, and individual goal setting. This report discusses those options, includes sections on appraisal of teacher performance, and suggests goals for professional teachers.

This report represents the second in a series of surveys designed to develop a profile of British Columbia's Income Assistance (IA) clients and to determine the factors that lead people to require IA and the factors that contribute to their ability to achieve independence. This study is based on six monthly surveys of 4,477 IA clients who left the IA caseload and subsequently returned. Information in this report is in a question and answer format, providing a summary of the results of the six surveys conducted May through October 1994. Each section of the report begins with an overview of the relevant findings, followed by a more in-depth discussion of results. Where possible, comparisons are made with new entrants to the IA caseload, the overall IA caseload, and the general population of the province.

The Canadian Environmental Protection Act (CEPA) has features that foster encouragement of public participation in environmental protection and decision-making. However, CEPA has some limitations with respect to public participation. This report examines legislative initiatives in Canada and other jurisdictions that include some of the primary features that foster public participation in environmental protection. Aspects of such features include public involvement in design and implementation of environmental laws and policies, public ability to seek protection of the environment through the courts, and protection for whistleblowers who oppose and warn against environmental harm. The report assesses the various options for public participation in environmental litigation rights and those elements of enhanced environmental rights in CEPA. Finally, it outlines options to consider in reviewing and amending CEPA.

This report presents a compilation of data from the published literature on ingestion rates, egestion rates, and gill ventilation rates for benthic invertebrates. For the ingestion and egestion tests compiled, the data include genus and species, dry weight, sample size, temperature, food type, method of measurement, and measured ingestion or egestion rate on a dry- and wet-weight basis. For the gill ventilation tests, the data include genus and species, dry weight, temperature, and measured gill ventilation rate. Both marine and freshwater species are included. Simple regression analyses performed on the data provide descriptive equations relating organism weight to ingestion rate, egestion rate, and gill ventilation rate.

Rationale document for the development of an interim Ontario drinking water objective for tritium

Toronto : Ministry of Environment & Energy, 1994. vii, 88 p. : ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-7778-3826-5
MICROLOG 95-05529 (2 fiche)

In order to assist in the public review of the Ontario Drinking Water Objective (ODWO) for tritium, this report summarizes the process by which the current ODWO for tritium of 40,000 becquerels per liter (Bq/L) was established. It reviews the pertinent information that has become available since the ODWO was established and provides the rationale for recommending an interim ODWO of 7,000 Bq/L for tritium. The interim objective will be applied as a health-related maximum acceptable concentration. The report includes an overview of the properties of tritium, its sources and occurrence, the health effects of ionizing radiation, drinking water guidelines for radionuclides in various jurisdictions, and the socio-economic impact of the revised tritium ODWO. The report ends with a consideration of issues considered by the Minister's Advisory Committee on Environmental Standards in reaching a decision on the revised tritium objective.

Dans ce bulletin, on étudie les tendances des recettes fédérales depuis le dépôt du rapport de la Commission Carter, en 1967. On y discute de la volonté du gouvernement de toucher des recettes plus élevées au début des années 70 et des mesures de réforme prises au cours de cette décennie, lesquelles ont considérablement réduit les recettes gouvernementales par la suite; on y discute ensuite des mesures que prend actuellement le gouvernement pour réduire son déficit, lesquelles ont donné lieu à des hausses d'impôt, et des efforts faits en vue d'en arriver à une réforme fiscale. Finalement, on examine également plusieurs questions analytiques liées à la fiscalité.

The purpose of the Task Force on the Primary Prevention of Cancer was to advise the Ontario Ministry of Health with respect to the development of an action-based, effective, and feasible plan detailing recommendations for primary prevention of cancer. The Task Force reviewed the literature on cancer risk factors and on the effectiveness of primary intervention approaches, considered evidence from external experts, and prepared an action plan. This report presents the results of Task Force investigations and its recommendations with regard to tobacco, dietary risk factors, alcohol, physical activity, occupational and environmental carcinogens, sunlight exposure, reproductive life and related factors, infections, medications, genetics, and socio-economic determinants of cancer. Strategies for implementing the recommendations are also included. An appendix list persistent known or suspected environmental carcinogens.

This paper defines and discusses the terms: prior learning assessment, course, challenge process, and eligible for challenge. It makes recommendations on adoption of the definitions by the Ontario Ministry of Education and on meeting a goal to have 50% of Ontario college courses eligible for challenge. Under the defined challenge process, an individual with prior learning experiences could have such learning measured against specific courses' learning statements for the purpose of awarding credit without requiring enrolment in the course.

Explique que le programme de reconnaissance des acquis (PRA) est un système qui évalue la formation obtenue à l'extérieur des collèges et la compare avec celle acquise par le biais de cours et programmes collégiaux. Souligne qu'il permet aux candidats adultes, qui peuvent démontrer ou prouver qu'ils ont atteint les objectifs d'un cours donné, d'obtenir des crédits collégiaux officiels. Vise à rendre le réseau collégial plus souple et plus efficace et à encourager les adultes à poursuivre leurs études ou leur formation, leur expérience étant prise en considération et la période d'études étant écourtée. Ce document de travail est le fruit des efforts déployés depuis quelques mois par le Comité consultatif sur la reconnaissance des acquis. Il propose un modèle de PRA pour les collèges de l'Ontario, explique certains enjeux sur le plan scolaire et financier qui influent sur l'élaboration d'un PRA et propose les directions que pourraient prendre ces enjeux. Le Comité a étudié 4 principales catégories de méthodes de reconnaissance des acquis: examens d'évaluation; tests normalisés; évaluation de cours ou de programmes; et le portfolio (recueil de documents produits par les candidats afin de prouver leur expérience et d'analyser et d'organiser les compétences et connaissances acquises).

Redirecting care from Winnipeg hospitals to ten large rural facilities : estimated number of cases, feasibility and implications

A key aspect of a 1992 health reform plan in Manitoba was the requirement that redirection of care from Winnipeg to rural hospitals should be considered. The investigators undertook a study to assess the potential for redirecting care and to estimate its impact. They identified ten facilities in the following locations for explicit study: Brandon, Steinbach, Dauphin, Flin Flon, Morden-Winkler, Portage, Selkirk, Swan River, The Pas, and Thompson. These facilities are considered to have potential for further development as regional centers in the health reform process. This report describes the study methodology and presents the results regarding hospital service areas, patterns of care, and numbers of cases for redirection.

Small business has been characterized as a driving force in Canada's economy, but small business operators commonly allege that over-regulation is stifling their growth. This paper begins by outlining the concerns of small business with regard to taxation, paperwork, government deficits, internal trade barriers, and availability of capital and credit. The paper then reviews the regulatory framework governing small business in Ontario and the provincial and federal policy and program initiatives undertaken to promote small business. Aspects of these initiatives include tax credits, health tax relief, assistance in job creation, inter-provincial trade agreements, and improving access to capital.

Examines the situation of refugee students in Toronto public schools, the response of school staff to the change in student population, and ways for teachers, schools and the school system to help such students. Findings are based on interviews, observations of local school team meetings, data from student registration files and the 1991-92 Every Secondary School Student Survey, and related literature. Suggests ways in which the Board could provide information for school staff, refugees and their parents; how schools can help meet refugees' needs through a whole-school approach and outreach to parents; and how the system can offer necessary in-service support to staff, use existing resources more effectively and solicit external support. Expresses the hope that this paper will help raise educators' awareness of and sensitivity to the issue.

The Ottawa-Carleton Regional Plan Review is a comprehensive examination of existing official plan policies and requirements for the future. This report describes work done to date on reviewing the existing policies related to mineral aggregate resources in the region. This work includes an updating of the information base on limestone, sand and gravel, and clay resources, and the development of evaluation criteria to identify and prioritize the areas that should be considered for designation as Mineral Resource Areas. Such areas would then be protected from uses incompatible with mineral resource extraction, consistent with policies based on designating sufficient resources to meet projected demand for mineral aggregates.

The British Columbia Premier's Forum on New Opportunities for Working and Living was asked to review policy options for renewing the province's social safety net, to advise on developing a renewal plan for the province, and to provide input related to federal social security reform plans. This report presents the results of the Forum's deliberations, beginning with an overview of the need for reform in view of changes in the economic, social, and fiscal conditions in British Columbia. The report describes challenges, current programs, and opportunities for renewal in meeting the needs of children, young adults and the transition to work, adults from age 25 to retirement, people with disabilities, the elderly, and delivery of services. A focus of the report is the importance of work and the goal of minimizing dependence on the welfare system.

MICROLOG 95-05841 (2 fiche)

In Nova Scotia, the Towns Act was amended in 1992 to require municipalities to register properly funded pension plans for town clerks. The Stellarton Town Clerk, Adrian Pearson, accordingly proposed a pension plan based on an existing agreement between himself and the town council. The council's eventual response was unsatisfactory to Mr Pearson, and he lodged a complaint with the provincial Ombudsman that the Stellarton mayor and town council did not treat him fairly and failed to give sufficient credence to evidence regarding the existing pension agreement. This report presents the facts of Mr Pearson's case, the responses of the town officials, and the recommendations of the Ombudsman regarding the matter. Appendices include various memoranda, Towns Act excerpts, council minutes and transcripts, letters, affidavits, and legal opinions relating to the matter examined by the Ombudsman.

This report reviews the state of the art and the practice of measurement of retroreflectivity of pavement markings, presenting a detailed examination of the design and function of the Mirolux-12 hand-held reflectometer. The report discusses the causes of the inconsistent readings observed when using this instrument and gives guidelines for obtaining meaningful measurements. The researchers set up a test bench to obtain near-absolute values for retroreflectivity of pavement marking samples under different sets of conditions and for comparing instrument readings, and made retroreflectance measurements using three types of reflectometers and two types of lasers. The report presents the results of these trials, including the degree of correlation between measurements made using laser and conventional light sources. The report makes recommendations regarding design of a laser-based reflectometer and also discusses a prototype mobile retroreflectometer intended for high-speed measurements.

from the latest 30-year normal period for 50 climatic stations in Ontario to determine crop heat units (CHU) available for silage and grain corn production and for other heat-loving crops such as tomatoes, soybeans, edible beans, and tobacco. This report estimates dates for starting and ending CHU accumulations for each year at each location, and presents weekly accumulations after May 30 for each year. It also presents results of a computation of the probability that selected threshold levels of CHU will be reached at each location, and includes a map of CHU isolines for Ontario.

The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms came into force on April 17, 1982. The legal rights guaranteed by the Charter are contained in sections 7 to 14. These sections deal with such matters as the right to life, liberty and security; the right to be secure against unreasonable search and seizure; the rights of an accused upon arrest; the right of an accused to certain proceedings in criminal and penal matters; and the right not to be subject to cruel and unusual punishment. There are now a great number of decided cases dealing with these actions. This paper concentrates on significant decisions of the provincial courts of appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada with respect to the provisions relating to search and seizure, arrest and detention.

Sedimentology of the Late-Orogenic sedimentary Jackson Lake formation in the Slave province

Based on well-established local stratigraphy and geochronological measurements, it is now possible to define characteristic facies associations and recognize distinct basin-forming events in selected areas of the Slave Province. In the Archean Jackson Lake Formation in the Yellowknife area, investigators have recognized three basic facies associations and have suggested that these represent coalescing coarse clastic fan-deltas prograding into shallow-water settings. This report discusses the preliminary results leading to this interpretation. It describes the geologic setting of the Jackson Lake Formation, the stratigraphic sections studied, and their lithology and inferred depositional environment.

Mineral deposit profiles are concise descriptions of the geological characteristics, mineral exploration indicators, and economic factors associated with a particular deposit type. This report presents coal and metallic mineral deposit profiles for the types of deposits found in British Columbia. Information provided with each profile includes coal/mineral commodity extracted, names of actual examples of deposits fitting the profile, tectonic setting, associated rock types, deposit form, lithology, weathering, ore controls, geochemical and geophysical signatures, typical ore grades and tonnages, ore mineralogy, associated deposit types, economic importance of the deposit type, and bibliographic references. Indexes give access to the profiles by lithological affinities and deposit group.

This paper examines the maturation process of firms that enter an industry by constructing new plant and investigates the extent to which improvements in the performance of an entry cohort are the result of a selection process that culls out the most inefficient entrants of a learning process that allows survivors to improve their performance relative to incumbent firms. Both selection and evolutionary learning are found to affect post-entry performance, but selection per se is a more important contributor to the overall growth of a cohort.

There are two basic legal aspects to the issue of sexual orientation: one is the prohibition of discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation, which is primarily designed to ensure that lesbians and gay men are not discriminated against; the second involves the recognition of same-sex relationships, and the extension to them of benefits and rights equivalent to those accorded to heterosexual relationships. This paper reviews some of the legal issues related to sexual orientation in Canada. The emphasis is on the federal level and Parliament, but reference is also made to developments at the provincial and local levels, and in the private sector. The paper is concerned only with legal developments and issues.

In 1959, an agreement with the federal government led to the management and operation of a federal day school, Turquetil Hall (Chesterfield Inlet, Northwest Territories) by the Catholic Episcopal Corporation of Hudson's Bay. During a school reunion in 1993, various students described their experiences and recollections of attendance at the school, including allegations of abuse. The territorial government then initiated an inquiry into the treatment of Turquetil Hall students. This report presents the results of that inquiry, which involved interviews with former students, church officials, and police. It reviews the students' education, experiences of physical and sexual assaults, emotional abuse, and cultural assimilation, and positive benefits of the school. The report then discusses options for response to the issues raised and makes recommendations regarding such options.

Un site du patrimoine peut être un bâtiment, une construction ou un endroit qui a une valeur archéologique, historique ou naturelle. La Loi prévoit 2 catégories de qualification: provinciale et municipale. Tout site exceptionnel ou représentatif de l'histoire ou de la préhistoire du Manitoba, de ses peuples et de leur culture, ou de l'histoire naturelle de la province, peut qualifier de site du patrimoine. Pour chaque site qualifié pendant l'année passée, on offre le nom, l'emplacement, le propriétaire, la qualification, et une description de l'importance. Le Programme de subventions aux bâtiments qualifiés de sites du patrimoine aide les propriétaires et preneurs à bail de bâtiments historiques à entreprendre des travaux de conservation. Les subventions accordées dans le cadre de ce programme sont regroupées en 2 sections. La 1ère, travaux en cours, énumère des subventions accordées. La 2e, travaux complétés - provinciaux ou municipaux, donne une description détaillée des travaux y inclut le nom du site, l'emplacement, le propriétaire, le programme, et le montant de la subvention. The Provincial Utilization Management Coordinating Committee studied variations in rates between New Brunswick and other jurisdictions for 21 medical and surgical procedures and conditions, and the factors underlying the variation in rates among New Brunswick health regions. The utilization rate analysis examined the quality of care being delivered, with a view to maintaining an appropriate level of quality in services provided. Information for the analysis came from population census and hospital inpatient and day surgery data for the selected conditions. The Committee also developed an explanatory model for each of the conditions, which identifies the impact of different supply and demand factors on rates of hospital utilization in New Brunswick. This report presents the results of the Committee analyses along with policy options identified as potential tools to assist in the achievement of improved utilization rates.

This document presents the Social Planning Council's observations and recommendations regarding major issues which, in the Council's opinion, should inform the development of Metropolitan Toronto's long-term social development strategy. The document begins by noting the changing demographic, social, and economic characteristics of the Toronto region, including the increasing growth of the suburbs outside of Metro Toronto. It then outlines guiding principles toward formulating a social development strategy that would be integrated with an economic development strategy. Social development issues covered include education and job training, housing and land use planning, poverty, community health and social services, living in an ethnically diverse and multiracial society, and personal safety. An appendix includes discussion of funding trends for human services in Metropolitan Toronto.

This study aimed to identify the specific social behaviors of learning disabled (LD) children that are correlated with their peer status, and to examine how these behaviors affect the peers' control strategies. The study was guided by five research questions: gender differences in social interaction; differences from non-LD children in social behavior and control strategies; differences in social behavior in dyads with different LD and non-LD mixes; the relation between peer status and social behavior; and the relation of a subtype of learning disability to social behavior. Research methods involved intensive analysis of videotapes of LD and non-LD children interacting in dyads and in groups of six. The study discusses a number of conclusions on gender differences, social behavior, interacting situations, effects of group size on behavior, status group differences, reading competence, and related matters. Appendices include an adaptation of Siegel and Heaven's (1986) definition of learning disabilities and method of subtyping LD children. ED ON OR PR SA SS

Social Life is a social skills training program for developmentally handicapped adults. The purpose of this study was to adapt Social Life for use with children with learning disabilities (LD) in a school setting and to evaluate the program when implemented with 8- to 10-year-old LD children in self-contained special classes. The aims of the program were to improve the children's social skills, to decrease their problem behaviors, to improve their peer acceptance, and to maintain improvements in social skills, peer acceptance, and behavior for a year following treatment. The subjects were 45 children allocated to three groups. One group received social skills and academic skills training, another received only social skills training, and a control group received no training. A board-type game was used to deliver the social skills training. This report presents the results of the study and includes material from the Social Life program, questionnaires, and study protocols. ED ON OR PR SA SS

The federal government has recently made severe budget cuts to respond to the forces of globalization and the growth of public debt, with consequent effects on Canada's social deficit. This paper presents the views of the Canadian Council on Social Development regarding a more holistic vision for addressing the current economic and social deficit than simply cutting expenditures. It reviews the extent of public spending and its effect on the deficit, the role of the tax system, government expenditures through the tax system, alternatives for generating revenue by means of fiscal reforms, the social policy effects of the new Canada Health and Social Transfer system for block fund transfers to the provinces, and the need for the federal government to have effective leverage to influence social policy. Legumes are plants that bear their seeds in pods, and are of interest because they fix nitrogen by bacteria in root nodules. This bulletin reviews the interest in legumes in Saskatchewan agriculture and describes the role of legumes in biological nitrogen fixation and the effects of legumes on improving soil quality and improving the nitrogen supply for subsequent crops. The bulletin outlines the advantages of legume green manures over conventional summerfallow and then describes legume agronomy and management. Annual grain legumes, biennial forage legumes, and perennial forage legumes and their varieties, seeding, weed control, fertilization, and rotations are considered. Other topics covered in the bulletin are the inoculation of legume seeds with Rhizobium bacteria and equipment requirements for legume farming. AG MS PR SC

Over the past 15 years, the equity and justice movements have experienced a revolution in strategy, based on the politics of identity and on coalition building. This new strategy works well in handling some local and regional struggles arising from the changed environment but is dangerously unsuited to other issues which require more durable, international solidarities. This paper examines the origins of the present crisis of strategy, discussing the new economic order and the weakening of the national state, the limits of the current strategic renewal, the ways to build on the similarities and existing links between unions and other equity groups, and the focusing of the new emphasis on the politics of identity to strengthen efforts to achieve economic justice. The paper also includes responses to those remarks from a Social Planning Council panel. CO LA MU ON SA SS

Status and outlook for the major commercial fish species of Lake Huron, 1995

By S.R. Gile and L.C. Mohr. Owen Sound, ON : Ministry of Natural Resources, Lake Huron Management Unit, 1995. iii, 180 p. : ill., Maps (Report / Ontario. Lake Huron Management Unit ; 1-95 ISSN 1180-291X) ISSN 1180-226X
MICROLOG 95-05531 (2 fiche)

The commercial harvesting of fish from Lake Huron is controlled through area specific allocations and licensee specific quotas which are subject to annual review and revision. This document traces annual harvests for the decade and relates those harvests to the allocations for those years that quota-control has been in place; traces the relative abundance of the primary commercial species through data derived from commercial fishing reports; describes the character of the harvest and of the populations through age and size data taken from on-board sampling of representative commercial catches; and presents a tracking of year-to-year changes in reproduction through independent fishing together with comments on the likely impact of the recruiting year classes. Forecasts of changes in the supply of commercial fish are made based on the composite picture developed.

The population of the badger, Taxidea taxus, in British Columbia is small and is spread over the southern interior of the province. They have not been legally harvested in British Columbia since 1967, and though it is not known whether overharvesting has contributed to a decrease in badger populations, habitat loss has played a significant role. This report describes the badger's general biology, including reproductive capability, movement, and behavior; habitat, habitat distribution, and habitat status; geographic distribution in North America, Canada, and British Columbia; population size and trend; protection under the law; factors such as predation, parasitism, and human disturbance that limit increases in population; and the special significance of the species. The report concludes with recommendations for further research and management options for preserving and enhancing badger populations in the province.

Columbian sharp-tailed grouse, Tympanuchus phasianellus columbianus, currently occupy about 62,000 square kilometers of range in south central British Columbia. Estimated habitat available for this species is about 800,000 hectares and the minimum breeding population in spring 1993 was estimated at about 4,600. Although habitat conditions are favorable and there is no imminent threat to the grouse's survival, populations have declined over much of the area as much of its habitat has become unusable for various reasons. This study provides a descriptive analysis of a sample of bachelor-level university graduates derived from a representative database of 1982 graduates of Canadian universities, colleges, and trade schools that was based on interviews in 1984 and 1987. The analysis cross-tabulates data on such topics as activity rates, distribution of graduates across a field of study, job satisfaction, distribution of graduates by industry and occupation, overall earnings levels by sex and field of study, and the job-education match and earnings. Emphasis throughout the analysis is on two sets of comparison: science versus non-science graduates, and men versus women within each field of study. The study also includes results of a regression analysis of the earnings of science and non-science graduates, with an emphasis on the gender earnings gap.

The purpose of this study was to identify language retention strategies and community resources that can help Canadians in different parts of the country maintain and develop the French second-language skills they learned at schools. The study had three components: 22 case studies of second-language learners from six Canadian provinces, who were not of francophone background but who had successfully maintained their proficiency in French beyond their formal schooling; documentation of significant French-language resources that are readily available to learners in different parts of Canada; and the text of a booklet designed to disseminate the above information to the public. By focusing on the retention strategies of those who have successfully maintained their second-language skills, the study also contributes to the growing body of research on second-language retention and attrition. The study report includes the scales used by case study interviewers and an outline showing the types of information gathered in the interviews.

This submission acknowledges and discusses the major economic and social impact of the recession on Ontario, and makes a plea for continued government financial support for education. The submission notes the importance of public education in the development of moral, intelligent, and useful citizens, and reviews the effects of reduced provincial support. The submission also suggests ways of achieving savings, a clearer definition of the role of schools in social services, a revision of board transportation policies, implementation of uniform and improved accounting, and delay of some capital allocations.

The submission includes statistical information on provincial and board expenditures, transfers to school boards, and per-pupil support. The submission also reviews new provin-

After an introduction reviewing the general characteristics of the sunflower family, this volume provides detailed taxonomic descriptions of species found in British Columbia from four tribes of this family: Astereae (including asters and daisies), Anthemideae (including sagebrush and tansy), Eupatorieae (including bricklebrush), and Inuleae (including filago and everlasting). An important purpose of this guide is to enable non-botanists to identify different species, and it includes identification keys, illustrations of various parts of the plants, and maps of the plant's known geographic range in the province. An appendix includes a glossary, lists of species and synonyms, and a list of excluded taxa.

La surpêche des stocks qui chevauchent la zone de 200 milles est généralement considérée comme l'un des principaux facteurs à l'origine du malaise qui sévit actuellement dans le secteur des pêches de l'Atlantique, malaise qui se traduit par une diminution des ressources, une immobilisation des bateaux au quai, des fermetures d'usines de transformation du poisson ou une réduction considérable de l'activité dans le domaine de la pêche. Ce document se penche précisément sur cette question. Les principaux points abordés sont les suivants : la Commission Internationale des pêcheries de l'Atlantique nord-ouest; l'Organisation des pêches de l'Atlantique nord-ouest; la détérioration des relations entre les membres de l'OPANO; la Convention des Nations Unies sur le droit de la mer; et, les faits nouveaux.

These guidelines are intended for helping experienced land surveyors become familiar with the particular engineering survey requirements for the development of farm-scale soil and water conservation projects. The guidelines provide information on site reconnaissance, general requirements for level surveys, and specific advice for surveying erosion control projects, water management projects, conservation projects, and culverts. An appendix outlines the basic procedures for conducting a total station survey using a Geodimeter 400 and a TDS-500 Data Collector, and describes how the data can be transferred, displayed, and analyzed.

This document presents the findings and recommendations of a panel charged with scientifically reviewing current forest practices standards in Clayoquot Sound, Vancouver Island, and recommending changes to existing standards to ensure that these practices are sustainable. The document describes the Clayoquot Sound environment, silvicultural systems, tree harvesting systems, transportation systems, and scenic, recreational, and tourism resources. The panel findings note the extent to which current standards for forest planning and information collection, physical processes of timber extraction, and provisions for incorporating scenic, recreational, and tourism values meet precepts for sustainable ecosystem management. The document also notes current approaches to planning, new approaches to planning at three levels, special planning aspects of hydrographer reserves, and recommendations for monitoring watershed and coastal integrity, biodiversity, and human activities and values.

System incremental cost study : 1994 update, with regional results appendix

This study estimates British Columbia Hydro's incremental costs of providing energy and capacity from the point of production to the point of consumption, reflecting the utility's corporate costs over periods ranging from one to 20 years. The study uses generation and bulk transmission capacity costs which are based on the costs underlying the utility's 1994 CONES study, which provides annual dollar per kilowatt-year costs of capacity by region for 1996 to 2006. This study differs from the CONES study in that it includes all of the costs of local transmission and distribution and uses costs based on system averages. The study discusses the methods used for calculating and allocating the incremental costs and explains the impacts of the proposed incremental cost methodology on costs by customer class.

The purpose of the report is to provide information about Quaternary geology that would be valuable for drift prospecting, and discussion is included of the observed relation between till composition, glacial transport, and composition of local bedrock. Samples were analyzed for selected trace, minor, and major elements in the clay-sized and silt/clay-sized fractions of till, lithology of the pebble fraction, and presence of gold grains and kimberlite indicator minerals. The bulk of the report consists of tables of geochemical and clast lithology data, statistical data on pebble counts and geochemical composition, and till geochemistry/clast lithology maps of the study area.

A proper momentum analysis is required to extract torque and thrust from flow survey data behind a propeller in compressible flow. This report presents such an analysis and applies it to five-hole probe survey measurements taken immediately behind a propeller at free stream Mach numbers of 0.6 and 0.7. The analysis led to integral expressions for torque and thrust in terms of local flow quantities such as flow angles, total pressure, and Mach number, that can be derived from five-hole pressure probe measurements in the near slipstream. This study also compared the derived thrust and torque coefficients with those derived from balance measurements, and compared radial torque and thrust loading distributions derived from the probe data with theoretical data based on strip analysis.

This analysis of child poverty in Canada begins by examining the links between the unequal futures of children and the unequal economic conditions of their families. It describes the legacies of family poverty on children, including poor health, social problems, and low education, and reviews the current state of child and family poverty in Canada. The report notes the disparities in life chances among Canadian children, including spending differences among family income groups, and discusses the implications of income disparities for poor children and families. Finally, it reviews the structural sources of poverty in Canada, including the erosion of social policy supports to children, the shifting of tax burdens, and the results of economic policies. The report concludes with recommendations for national policy commitments and constitutional reform to eliminate child poverty.

The report determines new bounds for the energy that can be coupled from a damped sine wave, a rectangular radio-frequency pulse, and an inverse-exponential pulse. The results of the report show the usefulness of energy bounds as an approach to the estimation of interior fields and coupling to systems inside a structure with apertures. This approach has potential for simplifying the electromagnetic hardening of electronic systems.

An impediment to achieving integrated resource management is the lack of information on all major resources under consideration. Incomplete resource inventories have led resource managers and planners to seek local knowledge and expert opinion as alternative sources of information. This report assesses the use of local knowledge and expert opinion in different resource agencies of British Columbia and other provincial and state jurisdictions, and describes the relationship of local knowledge and expert opinion to formal inventories in planning projects. The report also makes recommendations on the management of local knowledge and expert opinion in land and resource management planning in British Columbia. Three examples provided in the report show how planners came to use local knowledge and expert opinion in British Columbia, leading to a change in plan direction.

The Manito Sand Hills is one of a number of large blocks of dunes in southern Saskatchewan that differs from other blocks in being located in a cooler, moister climatic zone, having unique landforms, and having relatively less disturbed vegetation. The ecological interest of the Manito hills, combined with decisions being made about land use in the area, have prompted a study to inventory the area's landscapes and vegetation in order to identify the portions which are most significant for the conservation of biological diversity. This report presents the results of the vegetation study. The researchers grouped the areas surveyed into 17 broad vegetation types and identified almost 400 plant species, including nine that are considered rare. Features considered particularly significant for conservation include certain wetlands, areas with active dunes, and saline areas.

In 1991, the Vegetation Management Alternatives Program conducted a field trial of a mechanized brush cutter at a northern Ontario site densely populated with a variety of non-desirable brush species. The cutter shredded the undesirable vegetation at the site and dispersed the shredded residue as a mulch over much of the site. The cutter manufacturer has claimed that the layer of mulch would slow the growth of undesirable vegetation, therefore use of the cutter may be an alternative to herbicide treatment. This report presents the results of a vegetation assessment of the trial area one year after site treatment with the brush cutter. It summarizes the abundance and density of ingrowth and regrowth of brush species, compares these values with species abundance and density values recorded in 1991 before and after site treatment, and compares the extent of regrowth with mulch cover and depth values. A list of plant species identified in the trial area is appended.

The paper presents an analysis of discussions among elementary school children of a social problem in which students from grade 3 and 6 classes of nine rural elementary schools were subdivided into groups of about five and asked to discuss a problem for five to ten minutes. Elements of the responses were classified using a hierarchical category system based loosely on schema analysis. The forced classification analysis pinpointed differences across group discussions that were linked to grade, holistic score, or treatment.

Through an examination of the literature, this document analyzes how violence against people with disabilities is defined, the kinds of violence to which those people are subjected, the contributing factors and causes of violence, the incidence of violence, issues relating to disclosure and responses to violence, and issues relating to the prevention of violence to people with disabilities. An effort is made in the review to focus both on the individual and systemic issues, and the interaction between them with respect to how people with disabilities experience violence in their lives. The review concentrates on literature relating to violence and disability in the Canadian context, but also includes other sources, particularly from Great Britain and the United States. A 31-page bibliography is included.

A Vision and its context : global context for forest practices in Clayoquot Sound

Victoria : Clayoquot Sound Scientific Panel, 1995. vii, 40 p. : Bibl. On cover: Report 4.
MICROLOG 95-05848 (1 fiche)

This document provides the context for the work of the scientific panel charged with making recommendations for sustainable forest practices in the Clayoquot Sound area of Vancouver Island. This context is shaped by international conventions to which Canada is a signatory, by national and provincial initiatives related to sustainable forestry, and by the area's forest values, history, government, and current patterns of use. The document describes how the values attributed to forests have changed over time and how forests in Canada, British Columbia, and Clayoquot Sound are currently valued; how the global community has expressed its concern for forest values in new international agreements; how the Canadian and British Columbia governments have responded; and how the panel's guiding principles provide the foundation for forest practices that meet or exceed emerging international standards.

In recent years, the presence in Canada of individuals who may, as Nazis or Nazi collaborators, have committed war crimes in Europe 40-45 years ago has raised a number of issues. Since no authoritative study of these issues existed, the Deschênes Commission was appointed in 1985 to investigate and report on the subject. This document presents information on the war crimes trials, the onset of the Cold War and the decision to halt war crimes trials, exclusions under Canadian Immigration Policy, the establishment of the Deschênes Commission, their report, and war crimes prosecutions. The recommendations emanating from this report are intended to help the Waterloo Region Roman Catholic Separate School Board staff accurately respond to their students' and community's needs as they relate to technological studies. This report discusses the consistency between technological studies programs and the vision of Catholic education, and lists learning objectives desired by employers (concepts, skills, and attitudes). It reviews the existing technological programs available in Board schools, taking into account such issues as the effects of new technology, alternative approaches, and accessibility for all students. The report suggests potential course offerings indicating the focus of each program, and includes sections on employment opportunities in the Waterloo region, on qualifications and professional development for teachers, and on the resources, supplies, equipment, and facilities needed. ED MU ON OR SS

This paper examines some of the areas in which the study of language in general, and the science of linguistics in particular, have provided useful insight into specific areas of artificial intelligence (AI), other than the area of computational linguistics. Areas of AI where language studies have contributed to AI in general include logic programming, fifth generation computing, knowledge representation, programming languages, semantic networks, database query languages, and expert systems development. Linguistic theories with an influence on language processing applications of AI include systemic grammar, generalized phrase structure grammar, and government-binding. The paper concludes with a discussion of points of convergence between AI and linguistics and of the desirability of more deliberate contributions from linguistics to AI. BC CU PR PS SS TE

Under the Workplace Hazardous Materials Information System (WHMIS), employers have responsibilities prior to product use, notably a requirement to provide programs of instruction to workers on hazards and protective measures. This report provides guidelines on topics with broad implications for such programs, including definition of objectives and coordination of WHMIS programs with those required under other legislation. The report also provides guidelines on means of handling a range of concerns that have emerged in some workplaces, including the concerns of multi-contractor, small-operation, hiring hall, and lower-hazard sectors. Other parts of the report list guidelines for evaluation of instruction programs, recommend means of assembling WHMIS-related resources, and describe some print and audiovisual resources currently available. This paper examines the role of cultural organizations in providing informal, continuing, and voluntary education for the public, and compares the way museums and performing arts organizations understand this role. The paper reviews the history of the relationship between cultural organizations and education in general, and in Ontario in particular. It presents a sample of policy statements from several Ontario public and non-profit cultural organizations, noting whether they attempt to help the public understand arts and culture. The paper also examines the commitment of the province to train public educators in those organizations, the role of education in museum policy and in the policy of performing arts organizations, and the use of standards established by Ontario's community museums as models for other organizations. MICROLOG 95-05795 (1 fiche)

This study was initiated as a pilot project designed to identify women's needs in response to the Vancouver Island Land Use Plan, using Port McNeill as the pilot community. The first section of this report highlights the theoretical approach adopted, emphasizing the importance of recognizing gender as a variable in conducting research on economic development strategies. The second section outlines three features of global restructuring to provide an international context to the study. The next section profiles the community studied and the women involved, outlines the project timeline, and discusses key features of the project strategy sessions. The fourth section discusses the general sentiments of the women who attended strategy sessions, providing a context for the proposals that follow. These proposals relate to development in such sectors as business, education, health, tourism, and housing. An appendix includes relevant statistics on Vancouver Island communities.

The Ontario Ministry of Correctional Services established the Women's Issues Task Force to formulate long-term policy recommendations for women in the provincial correctional system and specific action plans to address the policy direction. This report is the Task Force's final report to the Ministry and includes a general profile of women offenders, their treatment in the correctional system, and the specific needs of those women that should be addressed by the system. The report proposes a number of principles and policy objectives for directing the future policy of women in the provincial correctional system and includes separate sections for aboriginal women and female young offenders. The Task Force developed those principles and objectives in the context that acknowledges that incarceration is rarely if ever an appropriate placement for women in the provincial correctional system.

The Workers' Compensation Board of British Columbia, Board Governance review : report and recommendations

By Patrick O'Callaghan and Judi Korbin. Victoria : Ministry of Skills, Training and Labour, 1995. 37 p.
MICROLOG 95-06058 (1 fiche)

The British Columbia Minister of Skills, Training and Labour requested a review of the structure and operations of the Board of Governors of the province's Workers' Compensation Board. This report presents the findings and recommendations of that review. The report begins with a definition of governance and an overview of the functions and responsibilities of the Board of Governors. Issues considered in the review include the magnitude of the Governors' tasks, their lack of training, the performance of the Chair of the Board of Governors, the politicization of management roles, the turnover of Governors, lack of board cohesiveness, and the procedures used to appoint Governors. The recommendations pertain to such matters as the allocation of time and resources, the definition of the Governors' role, the type of people that should be appointed, the structure of board committees, the role of the Chair, and the Governors' time commitment.

The federal Young Offenders Act provides a legal framework for addressing the illegal behaviors of youth aged 12 to 17 years. Since its proclamation in 1984, the Act has attracted debate and criticism with regard to its ability to protect the public. In response to this concern, the Alberta government has initiated a consultation process to allow Albertans to express their opinions about the Act and suggest changes. This document first describes the background of the Act, its governing principles, provincial responsibilities for its enforcement, and trends in youth crime. The document then highlights major issues raised regarding the Act and poses questions for public discussion. These issues include sentencing practices, parental accountability, probation, and federal/provincial cost sharing. Appendices provide details on the Act, an outline of Alberta young offender services, and statistics on police-reported crime.
